New Jap Regime Safeguards MacArthur, Byrnes Asserts

IF ONLY IT WAS THIS SIZE—Judge Jimmie J. Daniell, chairman of the Larry Bell park board, at Marietta, Ga., scratches his head in wonder at the problem of moving and placing a real life-size B-29 which Mayor L. M. Blair has said will be turned over to the board when they can move it. Marietta is the only city to own such a prize. It will go to the city free of charge from Bell "leftovers." (Story on Page 2.)

General Censures Joint Plan

TOKYO, Dec. 30—(UP)—Gen. MacArthur said Sunday that the new Allied plan for control of Japan was made behind his back and over his objections, but that he would "try to make it work."

In a typical, outspoken statement, the supreme commander made it plain the plan for an 11-nation control body displeased him, and revealed:

1. That he objected formally to the idea on Oct. 31.

2. That he was not consulted again before the plan was adopted by the Big Three foreign ministers' at Moscow.

MacArthur disclaimed responsibility for the decisions reached at Moscow, but said that he would try to make the new plan work because "the issues involved are too vital for the future of the world to have them bog down."

DID OBJECT

"A statement attributed to a Far Eastern commission officer that I 'did not object to the new Japan control plan before it was approved at Moscow' is incorrect," MacArthur's statement said.

"On Oct. 31 my final disagreement was contained in my radio to the chief of staff for the secretary of state, advising that the terms 'in my opinion are not acceptable'. Any impression which the statement might imply that I was consulted during the Moscow conference is also incorrect."

MacArthur indicated that the plan had been outlined to him before the beginning of the Big Three meetings in Moscow in December, and that he objected to it then, but it was adopted without ever consulting him further.

His statement was amplified by an official spokesman for his headquarters, who said that MacArthur "didn't even know Japan was being discussed" at the Moscow conference "until he saw it announced in the daily press."

NOT CONSULTED

"Gen. MacArthur never received any information or communication whatsoever from the Moscow conference during the meeting," the spokesman said.

The Moscow plan created an 11-nation Far Eastern commission to replace the present Far Eastern Advisory commission. Under the new setup, the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and China can veto decisions and make policy.

MacArthur is to act as permanent chairman of the Big Four control council in Tokyo. On board policy matters, he must have the unanimous approval of the council.

"I have not one iota of responsibility for the decisions which were made in Moscow," MacArthur's statement said.

"Whatever the merits or demerits of the plan, it is my firm intent within the authority entrusted in me to try to make it work.

"The issues involved are too vital for the future of the world to have them bog down. With good will on the part of those concerned, it is my fervent hope that there will be no insuperable obstacles.

"As I said before, it is 'my full purpose to see it through'."

Says Reds Asked Nothing on Atom

By GRAHAM HOVEY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30,— (AP) — Secretary of State Byrnes assured the nation Sunday night that the new policy and control machinery for beaten Japan "safeguards the efficient administration" of Gen. MacArthur.

Byrnes also disclosed, in a radio report on the Moscow conference, that the Big Three foreign ministers had not discussed "technical or scientific matters" in connection with atomic energy control and that Soviet officials had asked no questions about the atomic bomb.

Amplifying remarks of British Foreign Secretary Bevin on Iran, Byrnes said the troubled affairs of that country were on the Moscow agenda and that at one stage, agreement seemed imminent for establishment of a three-power commission to study Iranian problems.

"NOT DISCOURAGED"

He was "not discouraged" by the failure to agree on Iran, Byrnes said. He added that it was the only important item on the agenda on which accord was not reached.

Obviously aware of widespread speculation on whether the new setup for Japan would circumscribe the policy-making powers of the U. S. and the administrative authority of MacArthur, Byrnes devoted much of his 3,500-word address to discussing the new 11-nation Far Eastern commission, to be set up in Washington, and the four-power Tokyo council.

The secretary had nothing to say about any consultation with MacArthur.

MacArthur earlier had denied a Washington statement of Thomas D. Blake, press officer for the Far Eastern commission, who said the general had not objected to the control plan before its adoption and had been informed on Moscow deliberations over the issue.

STILL HOLD JAP WHIP

Byrnes stressed again and again that the decisions to set up the commission and council left the U. S. in a top policy-making role for Japan and would not hamstring the administrative power of MacArthur.

The secretary said that "from the outset" the U. S. had planned to make control of Japan "an Allied responsibility."

Establishment of the 11-nation commission in Washington, with the veto power reserved for the U. S., Russia, Britain and China, assured that no basic Allied policy for Japan could be adopted without American concurrence, he said.

He cited the provision for the U. S. to issue interim directives to MacArthur "on all urgent matters," pending commission agreement, and said only these three subjects were excepted from this temporary power:

1. Changes in the control of Japan as set forth in the surrender terms.

2. Fundamental changes in the Japanese constitutional structure.

3. Changes in the Japanese government as a whole.

OVER COUNCIL

Byrnes pointed out that under the Moscow communique, MacArthur's administrative decisions in Tokyo—despite the presence of the four-power advisory council—also would be controlling on all three subjects, when commission approval would be necessary.

"The proposals we offered regarding Japan make it clear that we intend to co-operate with our Allies and we expect them to co-operate with us," Byrnes declared. "But at the same time our agreement safeguards the efficient administration which has been set up in Japan under the supreme Allied commander.

"It assures that the authority of Gen. MacArthur will not be obstructed by the inability of the Far Eastern Commission to agree on policies or by the inability of the Allied council to agree upon the methods of carrying them out.

"We were determined to assure that the outstanding and efficient administration set up and executed by Gen. MacArthur should not be obstructed."

ATOM LAST ON LIST

Byrnes disclosed that the subject of atomic energy control had been placed last on the Moscow agenda "at the request of the Soviet government."

These discussions, he said, were limited to the British-American proposal for establishment by the United Nations of a commission on atomic energy and related matters on the lines suggested by President Truman and Prime Ministers Attlee of Britain and King of Canada.

"At no time did we discuss any

U. S. Trained Dutch Marines Arrive in Java

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 30.—(AP) Two thousand American-trained and equipped Dutch marines arrived off Batavia Sunday, and the British said they probably would disembark within a few days.

The cabinet of the unrecognized Indonesian republic met immediately presumably to discuss the landings.

The Indonesians had protested the movement of additional Dutch forces into the Netherlands East Indies, but in this particular case had agreed sometime ago to allow the marines to be brought in to replace Amboinese natives serving in the Dutch army, Premier Sutan Sjahrir said. Sjahrir was prevented by illness from attending the cabinet meeting.

In announcing the marines' arrival, Allied headquarters said they would relieve Dutch native troops "who are going outside Batavia." The British said that Indonesian leaders had been informed that the Dutch marines would help enforce order, thus making possible the disarming of Dutch civilians.

Trained at Quantico, Va., Camp Eugene, N. C., and Camp Pendleton, Ore., and fully supplied with American equipment, the marines are considered among the finest troops in the Netherlands armed forces. Most of them were recruited in southern Holland. The Dutch are known to have 6,000 more marines, mostly Holland trained, awaiting shipment to the Indies.

British authorities announced the arrest of 91 persons in a search of Batavia. Those taken into custody included seven whom the British described as "well known Indonesian terrorist leaders."

Troops of the 23d Indian division succeeded in gaining control of all public services in Batavia Saturday without a shot being fired, the British said.

State Weekend Traffic Toll Totals Four Lives

Thomas Andrew Romeo, 36, Atlanta poet, of 513 Ponce de Leon avenue, was one of four persons killed in automobile accidents in Georgia over the weekend.

Other victims were Steve L. Ham, 52, editor of the Calhoun County Courier, of Arlington, and Jim Sword, 75, retired farmer, also of Arlington, who were in an accident near Arlington, and Charles Mills Sr., of Bridgeton, N. J., who was killed near Vienna.

Police Chief O. L. Roberts, of Jonesboro, quoting eyewitnesses, said Romeo met his death when he drove in front of a southbound Central of Georgia freight train two miles from Jonesboro about 4:15 p. m. yesterday. Romeo's body was taken to the Mann Funeral Home in Jonesboro.

Romeo, who in 1943 published a book of poems entitled, "Atlanta, My Atlanta," had a varied career, according to friends, in which at one time, a score or more of years ago, he ranked third as a lightweight prize fighter and had been a contender for the world's title. He had also served in the Navy. He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Catherine Carnes; his mother, Mrs. W. L. Young, and a sister, Mrs. J. M. Merrill, both of Atlanta.

Sword was killed instantly, according to State Troopers R. A. McNair and C. E. Franklin, when the car in which he was riding with Editor Ham Saturday night, struck an abutment of a bridge over Spring Creek, near Arlington. The crash followed a blowout, they said. Ham was picked up by Brown Widener, of Blakeley, who was passing, and taken to Blakeley hospital, where he died.

Charles Mill Sr., the state patrol reported, was killed in an automobile accident a mile from Vienna. Three members of his family in the car with him were seriously injured and taken to the Vienna hospital. They were his wife, Mrs. Mary Mills; his son, Robert T. Mills, of Norcross, Ga., and his son's wife, Mrs. Martha Ivey Mills.

Nazis Discovered In Refugee Guise

FRANKFURT, Germany, Dec. 30. — (AP) — An official Military Government report Sunday said that a large percentage of Baltic nationals enjoying United Nations refuge in at least two displaced persons camp had been found to be Nazi sympathizers.

The report added that a former Polish SS man wanted for atrocities had been found heading another displaced persons group.

The American G-2 investigation pointed the finger of suspicion, too, at Nazi elements who enjoy an Allied haven by day but engage in depredations at night and who are responsible for the main source of disorder and crime in Germany.

Legion Says Schools Turn Away Veterans

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(UP)—The American Legion has charged that hundreds of veterans are being turned away daily from universities and colleges in the New York area because these institutions have no facilities to handle the veterans wanting education under the GI Bill of Rights.

The Legion said that a survey conducted by its New York Collegiate Post showed that "veterans are streaming from college to college in a vain attempt to secure education." It predicted the situation would become worse in 1946 unless corrective measures were taken immediately.

Flood Drowns Eight

JERUSALEM, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Sixty mud huts and houses collapsed in the Gaza area in southern Palestine after a cloudburst Sunday and two women and six children were drowned and 25 persons reported missing. Five square miles, including parts of the town of Gaza, were flooded.

One Day Left To Save Georgia's Bond Record

Georgia's first black mark of its long and successful war effort is staring the state in the face. The Victory bond drive closes today with the state still several million dollars behind in its $28,000,000 E bond quota, according to Jackson P. Dick, chairman of the war finance committee.

Appealing to the people of Georgia, Dick yesterday asked them to save the name of the state by "saving the state from the disgrace of what would be our only failure on a war assignment." He said there was still time to keep the state from going under.

Georgia has made a splendid record in the past war loan drives, oversubscribing its E bond quota in each drive, but now that the war is won the people have relaxed in their determination to exceed the assignment. They have fallen far short of the $28,000,000 goal, but still have one chance left to make good.

Banks will be open during regular hours today and eager to do their part in pushing the state over the top, as will all other agencies selling bonds. These institutions only can sell the bonds; it is up to the people of the state to buy them. All bonds purchased during the day, whether by mail or directly, will be added to the state quota and will help put it over the top.

It is up to the people of Georgia, Dick said.

Northwestern China Gets First Railroad

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The first railroad line ever to penetrate the Hinterland Province of Kakansu in China's great northwest is to be opened to traffic Jan. 2.

It is an extension of the Lunghai railroad from Paochi, Shensi Province, to Tienshui in Southwestern Kansu. A test run was made Christmas day.

Morning Cloudiness Predicted To Clear

A cloudy morning sky will give way to a clear one this afternoon with lower temperatures, according to a report from the Atlanta weather bureau.

Police Connect Gang of Four With $75,000 In Car Robberies

Atlanta detectives have under arrest a gang which police say has admitted stealing property valued at between $50,000 and $75,000 from automobiles parked on Atlanta streets.

Loot worth thousands of dollars has been recovered and more is expected to be found in pawnshops, according to Detectives I. A. Thomas and T. J. Milligan.

For weeks bitter complaints from motorists had been reaching the police, but despite constant vigilance, the alleged car-looters evaded capture until Thursday night, when detectives reported that they caught Robert Hardy, 20, Negro, of 179 Walker street, and held him on a charge of suspicion of car robbing.

Grilling of Hardy led to the arrest of two other Negroes, George Kennedy, 23, and Tommy Lee Lewis, both of 253½ Auburn avenue. Information given by them, the detectives said, led the officers to city jail to question Robert Gazaway, Negro, of 253½ Auburn avenue, charged with the murder of another Negro.

The four confessed to car thefts, reported the detectives, as far back as October 27, and to stealing five automobiles. They threw away unwanted loot, or what they thought they could not dispose of easily, said the detectives. In this category, the detectives related, was a kit of surgical tools and two sheepskin coats stolen from a car owned by Dr. E. E. Chambers, of Chattanooga. These were found in a hedge on Spring street, undamaged.

The detectives said that the four men explained that they'd steal a car and stop it near another they wished to rob. Then one, with a screw driver, would break into the car. The other three would then help the first unload the contents of the car into their own and speed away, the report stated.

From bushes off Wylie street the detectives yesterday recovered, they said, war bonds valued at several thousand dollars. They said the four had told them where the bond had been thrown.

The detectives also located a

Air Liner Crashes Into Bay, Killing Woman; 10 Injured

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP)—One passenger was killed, another missing and 10 other persons were injured Sunday night when an Eastern Air Lines plane crashed into Flushing Bay near La Guardia field, police reported.

The air line said 11 passengers and a crew of three were aboard the Miami-to-New York plane, the list including Rep. Carl T. Durham, Democrat, North Carolina, of Chapel Hill, N. C.

Authorities identified the dead passenger as Mrs. J. M. Scully, of New York.

Attempting to land in a lashing rainstorm, the plane overshot the field and plunged into the icy waters off Riker's island about a half-mile from the field.

Police and Coast Guard launches pulled the passengers from the plane, which submerged about 500 feet off shore. A short time after the crash only the tail assembly protruded from the water. A Coast Guard flying boat cruised back and forth over the scene dropping flares.

Eastern said four of the passengers boarded the plane at Raleigh, N. C.; three at Richmond, Va., and four at Philadelphia. The pilot was listed as Sam Cavalier, 38, of Garfield, N. J., who during the war had flown hundreds of hours with the Army Transport Command on its Florida-to-South-America run.

Mine Sinks Navy Vessel

PEARL HARBOR, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The U. S. S. Minivet, a large minesweeper, struck a mine Saturday northwest of Kyushu Island, Japan, with "moderate loss of life and injury" to the men aboard, the Navy announced Sunday.

The accident occurred southeast of the island of Tsushima, in Tsushima strait, 48 nautical miles northwest of Kyushu.

No exact tabulation of the dead and injured is yet possible, the Navy said. Names of the casualties would be announced by the Navy Department after the next of kin are notified.

The 220-foot vessel was commissioned last July and carried a crew of approximately nine officers and 82 enlisted men. It was a unit of Task Force 52, and was supervising the sweep by Japanese vessels of a shallow minefield when it was ripped by the blast.

Aircraft and surface ships immediately began searching for missing crewmen.

Hitler's Final Ranting Was Plot To Perpetuate Nazi Ideology

By ANN STRINGER

NUERNBERG, Dec. 30.—(UP)—Adolf Hitler and Paul Joseph Goebbels spent their dying days in the Reichschancellery cellar hatching a final diabolical propaganda plot designed to perpetuate the Nazi war against mankind, their last testaments showed Sunday.

After long deliberation, Allied authorities released the full text of Hitler's last political testament, Goebbels' appendix to that document, and Hitler's personal will.

The political testament disclosed that both Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering and Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler had been expelled from the Nazi party and their state posts for "secret negotiation with the enemy" and "illegally attempting to seize control of the state," in the dying days of Nazi Germany.

Allied intelligence officers frankly admitted that disclosure of the documents would be "a terrific shot in the arm for remaining Nazis in Germany" and said they would "harm the Allied cause in Germany."

Why, in view of that, the documents were released for publication was not officially explained.

Hitelr and Goebbels did their best to build the legend of martyrdom about themselves. They pulled out all the stops in the organ and played the familiar hymn of hate against the Jews. As so often they had before, they whined that they were not to blame for the war.

"I have decided to remain in Berlin and choose death voluntarily," was the way Hitler pointed himself as a martyr.

"I express my unalterable decision not to leave the Reich capital even if it falls and, at the side of the Fuehrer, to end my life," Goebbels echoed.

Hitler dismissed Himmler and Goering, once his top deputy, in bitter words.

DENUNCIATION

"Before my death," he said, "I expel the former Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering from the party and withdraw from him the rights which were conferred on him by the decree of 29 June, 1941, and by my Reichstag speech of the first of September, 1939. In his place I appoint Adm. Doenitz as president of the Reich and supreme commander of the Wehrmacht.

"Before my death I expel the former Reichsfuehrer of the SS and the Minister of Interior Heinrich Himmler from the party and from all state offices . . .

"Apart altogether from their disloyalty to me, Goering and Himmler have brought irreparable shame on the country and the whole nation by secretly negotiating with the enemy without my knowledge and against my will, and also by illegally attempting to seize control of the state."

FIGHT ON

Hitler admitted World War II was lost, that Berlin was doomed within days, that trusted colleagues had deserted him, said he soon would take his own life. But still he tried to exhort the Germans to fight on after defeat.

"The establishment of a National Socialist state represents the work of centuries to come and obliges each individual person always to serve the common interest before his own advantage," he wrote.

Again he tried to rally them for an everlasting battle by saying:

"From the sacrifice of our soldiers and from my own comradeship with them to death itself, the seed has been sown which will grow one day in the history of Germany to the glorious rebirth of the National Socialist movement, and thereby to the establishment of a truly united nation."

That future Nazis might also have their female patron saint, Hitler depicted his mistress bride, Eva Braun, as a faithful wife who

OXYGEN ASSURES SOBER NEW YEAR

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 30.—(UP)—If you're afraid of a New Year's Eve hangover, just try inhaling quantities of oxygen. Dr. William H. Forbes, assistant director of Harvard University's fatigue laboratory, said Sunday night it's the best means of sobering up.

Nationalists and Communists Accuse Each Other of Mounting Offensives

GOLDEN WEDDING ON CHRISTMAS—Mr. and Mrs. Z. P. Ellington, of Fayetteville, Ga., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Christmas Day. Both are lifelong residents of Fayette county. On the same day, their two sons, Edwin Ellington, of Fayetteville, and Ralph Ellington, of College Park, celebrated their 19th and 20th wedding anniversaries, respectively.

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Chinese government and Communist quarters each charged that the other is pushing military offensives Sunday as the government looked for what it might consider as disadvantages in the Communist proposal that both sides stop where they are in an unconditional truce.

Government sources already have made it clear that they could accept no truce which would impede in any way restoration of railroad communications or disarmament of Japanese troops and have said that these would be the results if both sides simply halted wherever they might be.

Fears also were expressed that if the government were to accept the proposal without qualification, the Communists would renew some of their previous claims, such as a share in the disarmament of Japanese.

CONFERENCE DELAYED

The Communist proposal has been in the hands of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek since Dec. 28 and is being given serious consideration. The government's reply might be delivered a few days hence at the next formal meeting of representatives of the two sides, who last conferred Dec. 27.

There is practically no prospect that the forthcoming unity conversations will open on New Year's Day, as proposed by the Communists. Most quarters believe it unlikely this conference will start before the second week of January.

A Communist spokesman asserted that 225,000 government troops, in a drive aimed at conquest of Communist-dominated Jehol province, captured Kupehkow, Great Wall border town between China proper and Inner Mongolia, on Christmas Day.

A government dispatch declared the Communists, since mid-December, have been attacking Kufow, the Shantung province birthplace of the sage Confucius. It said 50,000 Communists were attacking the sacred city, trying to isolate it from the outside world.

More than 6,000 fully armed Japanese, a Communist dispatch alleged, were sent to fronts north and south of Taiyuan, capital of Shansi province, to participate in attacks against the Communists.

The Communist spokesman said the Communists were offering virtually no resistance in Jehol but were prepared to put up a stiff fight if forced. He belittled a government spokesman's recent assertion that the Communists proposed the truce because they had suffered severe defeats in Suiyuan and Shantung provinces.

REDS CLAIM GAINS

"We are sure of our strength," the Communist declared.

Another Communist dispatch said the Communists now control a 30-mile section of the Grand canal between Kaoyu and Nanking. It said in operations leading to the capture of Kaoyu and Shaopo the Communists killed or wounded 210 Japanese and 300 puppet troops and captured 940 Japanese and 4,550 puppets.

Communists also claimed capture of five strongpoints on the Tientsin-Pukow railroad, but admitted loss of Tsaoyang, highway center about 140 miles northwest of Hankow.

A dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Olen Clements in Tientsin noted an absence of any incidents in north China during Christmas week coincidental with Chungking conferences of Gen. Marshall, the U. S. envoy, with representatives of both sides.

Clements said reliable reports from Manchuria were that Gen. Tu Li-ming, commander of government troops in the north, did not expect to enter Mukden for another two weeks. Sources quoted the general as saying the Russians were responsible for the delay, the dispatch said, adding that apparently all sides were awaiting some sort of a decision before making the next move.

House Leaders to Heal Breach With Truman

By CLAIR JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP)—House leaders have decided to strive for settlement of the controversy with President Truman over the U. S. Employment Service as a No. 1 item of business when congress comes back Jan. 14.

This was disclosed Sunday by Chairman Cannon, Democrat, of Missouri, of the appropriations committee. He told a reporter that "we want to get this issue decided immediately, so we can push ahead with other business."

House labor committee clerks reported that Majority Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, has asked that hearings on the subject start the opening day and legislation be sent to the floor within a week.

The leadership reasoning, one committee aide said, is that relations between President Truman and congress will be improved if the differences over USES can be settled speedily.

The fight is over when administration of the employment service should be returned to state control. Congress approved legislation providing for such action within 100 days, but the measure was killed when Mr. Truman refused to sign it.

In announcing the "pocket veto" on Dec. 23, the President reiterated demands that federal control be retained until June, 1947. An earlier change, he said, would "immeasurably harm our reemployment program."

Mr. Truman also criticized the way the legislation was adopted—as a "rider" on a bill withdrawing $52,000,000,000 in war appropriations. He said such action "restricts the President's exercise of his functions and is contrary to good government." He either had to approve or kill both provisions, since the law prevents him from acting separately on them.

Cannon said house leaders agreed the "rider" procedure is "unfair." To avoid a recurrence in this case, he said, separate bills will be offered. One will be the funds cutback measure, to be handled by the appropriations committee. The other will be the USES bill, to be handled by the labor group.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach reported meanwhile that the employment service, in the five months since V-J day, has placed more than 500,000 veterans in jobs.

In a New Year's message to USES employes, he said that since V-J day USES had 42,000,000 visits from workers and veterans seeking jobs, information and guidance. Of these, 6,200,000 were referred to employers and 3,000,000 were hired.

Next year, he declared, USES and its veterans' employment service "will face problems comparable in importance only with the major manpower problems of the war."

Captain Charged With Homicide In Love Slaying

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Army Capt. Archie B. Miller, 25, of Bellevue, Tex., unshaven and wearing a badly rumpled blue civilian suit, stood silently in felony court Sunday and heard himself arraigned on a charge of homicide in the fatal shooting of a man police quoted his wife as saying she hoped to marry after obtaining a divorce.

Capt. Eugene Dale, 27-year-old Enid, Okla. Army flier who had survived the Bataan Death March and two and a half years of Japanese imprisonment, died in Roosevelt hospital Saturday morning, about 31 hours after being shot three times in the apartment of Mrs. Fay Hancock Miller, an attractive former model from Jonesboro, N. C.

Detective John Kennedy said that before Dale died he identified Miller as the assailant and that Miller admitted the shooting when arrested.

Capt. Miller, his officer's field coat thrown over his left arm, fingered the brim of his grey fedora as the charge against him was read by Harold Birns, assistant district attorney. He appeared keenly observant of the proceedings. There was no attorney present to represent him.

Magistrate Morris Rothenberg fixed Jan. 14 for a further hearing.

Before he returned to the Tombs, a city prison where he is being held without bail, Capt. Miller conversed briefly with Army Capt. Herbert Brill, who said he was on terminal leave and formerly was stationed near Capt. Miller's home in Texas. He said that although he had not previously known Miller he wanted to help him. His offer of help was declined.

Mrs. Miller, a registered nurse who abandoned that calling to become a photographer's model, was at Capt. Dale's side when he died. Later, exhausted from lack of rest and suffering from shock, she herself was admitted as a patient at the hospital.

Police quoted Mrs. Miller as saying she had fallen in love with Dale while her husband was in Europe and that she had hoped to marry him after obtaining a divorce.

Her sister, Miss Frances Hancock, and the latter's fiance, Arthur Gormley, a merchant seaman, also were present in the apartment during the shooting.

Champ of Shanks, Canine GI Greeter, To Retire to Texas

CAMP SHANKS, N. Y., Dec. 30. (AP)—Blossom, a shaggy white dog from the Bronx, official greeter for at least a million GIs who passed through this camp on their way overseas and coming home, will spend a happy new year in Texas.

After two years of strenuous duty, city-wise Blossom will have a chance to have adventures with Texas jackrabbits. His latest master, Pfc. Hooper Herson, of Route 1, Bonita, Texas, who is being discharged here Monday, is going to take Blossom to his father's ranch.

A high-spirited dog about the size of an Airedale, with long, white hairs dropping like icicles from his neck, Blossom licked all the other dogs in camp. In recent months he has defeated strange dogs from England, France, Germany and Italy imported by returning GIs.

Blossom was brought to Camp Shanks in 1943 by Sgt. Frank Kramer, of New York City, who said he originated in the Bronx, but gave no further details. After Kramer was sent to the Philippines last year, Blossom passed to other GI masters, finally being adopted by Pfc. Herson.

NO TERRIER—AN AIREDALE

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 30.—(AP)—Lt. Tiger is home from the wars boasting 800 flying hours, four battle stars on his campaign ribbons, the American Defense ribbon, a Presidential Unit Citation and a Good Conduct Medal.

The 1½-year-old toy terrier began his Army career as a plain buck private when, at the age of three weeks, he was presented as a mascot to Robert Hirsch, Buffalo.

Arriving in England with Lt. Hirsch in August, 1944, Tiger was "sworn into" the AAF as a flight officer. He piled up a total of 17 combat missions and nearly 150 resupply trips.

When Hirsch was granted terminal leave Sept. 15, Lt. Tiger also was discharged. The veteran finds life at home rather tame, says Hirsch:

"I think he misses the C-47s. Every time he hears an airplane engine he rushes outside to locate the ship making that beloved buzz."

Great Dane Ritz, A Dog of Degrees, Dies at Alma Mater

HILLSDALE, Mich., Dec. 30.—(AP)—Ritz, a ponderous Great Dane and holder of two honorary degrees from Hillsdale College, died peacefully in his sleep Sunday amidst the college atmosphere he loved so well.

The dog's introduction to college life came in 1936 when Edgar O. Lincoln, of Grand Rapids, presented him to the college chapter of Delta Tau Delta fraternity.

He soon became accustomed to the routine of classes, sports events and fraternity happenings. Ritz was given permission to attend any lectures he wanted and on occasions took brief naps if the subject matter wasn't to his liking.

In 1940, Ritz ambled to the graduation platform where former President W. O. Mauck made him a doctor of dogmatics and master of caninical law.

Never a ladies' man, he obviously was overjoyed as the number of male students went up this year as service discharges increased.

The big fellow seemed to take more interest in campus affairs this fall and barked strong support for the college's football team even though it lost all five games.

Motor Makers Stalled As Old Year Expires

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The nation's automobile manufacturers were closing their books on 1945 Monday with virtually the entire industry at a standstill because of strikes and a parts shortage, and with only 75,000 cars produced of the 500,000 the industry hoped to make this year.

General Motors plants, at the end of the first period of auto production since 1941, were closed by strike. The other motor makers, short of parts and sub-assemblies, wound up their 1945 manufacture last week. Ford and Chrysler were to resume production on a limited basis next Wednesday.

Walt Reuther, directing the strike of 175,000 GM employes, forecast "a winter of industrial war that may spread to all of American industry" unless the corporation negotiates a pay raise on the basis of its ability to pay.

Giving its reasons for withdrawing from government fact-finding hearings, General Motors said it refused "to subscribe to the death of the American system of competitive enterprise."

HOLDS OUT FOR 30

Before the fact-finding body completed its public hearings Saturday night, Chairman Lloyd K. Garrison introduced a Commerce Department report saying the automobile industry could absorb pay raises up to 15 per cent. Reuther said his union cannot accept less than a 30 per cent increase "except and to the extent that the economic fact may show that GM cannot pay that increase without increasing prices to consumers."

The fact-finding body will make its report to President Truman "as near to next Thursday as humanly possible," it announced.

Around 386,000 were idle in the nation's labor disputes, and the 1946 labor outlook was something less than auspicious.

WALKOUT THREATENED

The independent Western Electric Employes Association, also seeking 30 per cent more pay, has set 11 a. m. Thursday for a walkout of 19,000 employes of New Jersey and New York City Western Electric plants. President Truman has been asked to intervene in the dispute by Joseph E. Beirne, president of the Independent National Federation of Telephone Workers, who said a sympathy walkout by 450,000 telephone workers throughout the country was possible.

A work stoppage also is threatened in the steel industry, but the magazine Steel says the trade "is still hopeful of a peaceful settlement" before Jan. 14, the date set by the CIO steelworkers for a walkout. The steel workers are asking a $2 daily pay raise.

The organization, which is interdenominational, is the result of a movement begun in 1917, following Billy Sunday's campaign in Atlanta. The purpose of the executive meeting is to consider and adopt plans to further expand the program of activities of the association.

A banquet is planned for Tuesday night, with the principal address to be delivered by Dr. J. Park McCallie, president of the McCallie school, Chattanooga, Tenn., a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church and an active member of the Layman's Association.

Bell-Built Superfort Presented to Marietta

By LARRY YOUNG.

A town with many national recognitions in past years, Marietta will again be distinguished from others in that it will have a full-size Bell-built B-29 Superfort to use for display purposes.

Valued at approximately half million dollars, the plane is awaiting removal from the scrap heap at the Georgia division of the Bell Aircraft Corporation as a gift from Uncle Sam.

It will be turned over to the Larry Bell Park board when it can be moved. Judge Jimmie J. Daniell, chairman of the park board, sees placing and caring for the huge plane as his first headache for 1946.

"There is the problem of housing it . . . whether to build a fence around it, or try to put some kind of a roof over it," the judge explains. Of course, the plane will be used solely for exhibition purposes.

It will be placed in the park, where a $200,000 recreation building was recently dedicated.

Souvenir hunters pose one of the larger problems of the board. "The plane could be carried away in small pieces in no time," the judge reminded the board.

But the B-29, which is the only one turned over to any town in the country, isn't the only bright part of 1946 for this booming town.

"People thought Marietta would be a ghost town as soon as the war ended, but it's going to enter the new year with the brightest business and industrial future in its history," James V. Carmichael, vice president of Bell and manager of the Georgia Division, said.

Carmichael also faces something new in the coming year. He will change jobs, becoming president of the Carmichael Manufacturing Company. He has been released by Bell as the local manager but will continue as vice president of the concern.

Carmichael's ideas about Marietta are all good. "We've got more people now than we had during the peak of employment at the bomber plant and these people are not unemployed. The number of unemployed is way down," he said.

Carmichael expects to spend his full time with his furniture industry. He hopes to increase production of upholstered furniture in 1946.

Mayor L. M. Blair, who also faces something new in 1946, isn't discouraged about the tripled population of Marietta.

"We have more than 25,000 citizens now. We have plans for an enlarged hospital, more schools, and other civic improvements. But, we aren't going to build until prices come down and we can get what we want, even if it doesn't get done in 1946," Blair says.

"We are short on housing more than anything else, but soon homes will start going up. Everything is growing. We are getting new industries weekly and new citizens daily. I'm not worried about 1946," he said.

Blair will begin another term as mayor of Marietta on Jan. 1. He also will leave Bell where he has served as legal counsel, but will remain on call. His full time will be devoted to direction of the Marietta Cobb industries and the Aluminum Furniture Company of Georgia. Only a limited legal service will be done for Bell.

Blair says of the B-29, "We'll lick the problem of placing the plane just like we have everything else. It'll be worked out soon."

The huge bomber will tie in with the tourist attraction plans which Marietta's Chamber of Commerce has been working on.

"There'll be numbers of tourists attracted to Marietta just to go through a B-29," Joe S. Wingo, secretary of the chamber, says.

BROKE LEG IN 1943, LEARNS ON JUMP

BOSTON, Dec. 30.—(UP)—Ralph Rotheau of Chelsea learned for the first time Sunday that he had been walking around for two years on a fractured left leg.

When he jumped a short distance from his fishing boat to a pier, he felt a stabbing pain in the leg. Friends persuaded him to see a doctor whose examination revealed the old injury.

"It kinda hurt me for the past couple of years," explained Rotheau, "but I guess us fishermen are tough."

OPA Issues Sugar Rations After Jan. 1

Beginning Jan. 1, consumers, industrial and institutional users of sugar in Georgia will apply to Atlanta District Office No. 2, Office of Price Administration, 445 West Peachtree street, for their allotments.

Likewise, replacement of Ration Book 4, and new books for babies and returning veterans, as well as furlough rations, will be made by the District Office in Atlanta, OPA announced. Although price control boards no longer will issue any ration books or rationed commodities, application blanks will be placed at each of the 41 boards in the state for the convenience of consumers, the announcement said.

Veteran Students

The increase will be included in checks mailed Feb. 1.

Tires to Be Scarce in 1946 Despite Peak Production

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The rubber industry will hit an all-time high in production during 1946, but tires will be scarce all year, top officials of four big producers predicted Sunday.

"Manufacture of passenger and truck tires, barring unforeseen difficulties, will reach an all-time high," declared John W. Thomas, chairman of the board of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

Thomas believes the industry, its reconversion completed, should be in line to hit peak production by mid-March.

"Goal of the industry in a full year of peak production is 94,000,000 tires, which is 24,000,000 units above what the industry would figure as normal demand, had it not been for the replacement backlog," the Firestone executive added.

Tires will be scarce all year, said William O'Neil, president of General Tire & Rubber Co.

His statement was echoed by James J. Newman, B. F. Goodrich Co. vice president, who predicted four out of every 10 passenger auto wheels would be rolling on recapped tires in 1946.

"Premium tires will reappear," O'Neil stated, but General will not produce one until all the materials needed are available in sufficient quantity to assure a continuous flow through General's distributors. We expect to employ more persons than we ever have had on our payrolls."

While the industry catches up with demand it will be developing postwar potentialities of new materials "to assure maximum service and lowest cost to users of all types of rubber products," said John L. Collyer, Goodrich president.

"Technical progress will not be confined to synthetic rubber," he declared.

"Although there has been much discussion of spectacular postwar products stemming from the lessons learned in synthetic rubber, it is not anticipated that any of these will reach sufficient volume in 1946. Equipment for manufacturing them is not available," Collyer added.

P. W. Litchfield, board chairman of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., does not view the outlook as "at all encouraging."

Litchfield has held that America was at the crossroads of labor unrest and keyed his year-end summary to a plea for domestic unity of a like pattern to that for winning the war.

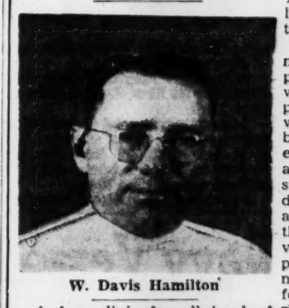
FREE CLINIC FOR HARD OF HEARING

Tiny Batteries and Postwar Hearing Devices Being Shown



W. Davis Hamilton

A free clinic for all hard of hearing persons is being conducted at Suite 606 in the 101 Marietta Street Building under the direction of W. Davis Hamilton, Acousticon deafness expert.

Free hearing tests and demonstrations of the new Acousticon hearing devices are being given. Of special interest are the new post-war "Super-Power" transmitters, a large assortment of Acousticon "Hearing Lenses," the Acousticon Unipac which weighs only 8 ounces and operates without separate battery pack, and the tiny new "Tom Thumb" B battery which is no larger than the end of your thumb.

Mr. Hamilton stated: "The new Super-Power Acousticons produce far more hearing power with the new light Midget power pack than was formerly possible with the largest and heaviest batteries. This vast hearing power, when used with our remarkable Hearing Lenses, is ideally suited for bone conduction and difficult air conduction cases, and is controlled so accurately that it can be used to good advantage in bringing out the most precise and delicate fittings for nerve deafness and the mildest forms of conductive deafness. In most cases we can now give clearer hearing at greater distance than was possible a short while ago. To have a free test in our office or in your home, just telephone MAin 4344 for appointment. There is no cost or obligation."

Persons who are extremely hard of hearing, or who have tried other aids without satisfaction, are especially urged to have tests.

Family Heir to Hangman's Job Has Lord Haw Haw as First

LONDON, Dec. 30.—(UP)—Albert Pierrepoint's first job in his new capacity as Britain's high executioner will be the hanging of William Joyce, alias Lord Haw Haw, who is scheduled to die on the gallows at Wandsworth prison Thursday.

Albert succeeded his 76-year old uncle, Thomas Henry Pierrepoint, who retired last week after 35 years as a hangman. The 37-year old Albert, is no novice at his new job, however. Since the end of the European war, both Albert and his uncle have been busy putting convicted Nazi war criminals on the scaffold.

Barring an unexpected repeal from Home Secretary Chuder Ede, Joyce will be the second traitor the younger Pierrepoint has executed. Two weeks ago he hanged self-confessed traitor, John Amery at Wandsworth prison.

Biggest Nazi killing handled by the uncle-nephew team to date was the execution of Josef Kramer, the "Beast of Belsen", Irma Greese, his blonde accomplice, and nine of their associates at Hameln, Germany, last month. The execution took all day and the elder Pierrepoint, who was paid about $240 for his work, announced his resignation when he returned home from Belsen.

Last October the Pierrepoint team executed five Nazi prisoners of war who killed a fellow-prisoner at a British camp in Scotland.

The new executioner is expected to participate prominently in any possible executions resulting from the Nuernberg war crimes trials of Nazi leaders.

The Pierrepoint hanging technique is generations old. A Pierrepoint always studies his victim through a cell observation window. It is said they had become so expert by this method that the length of rope needed to make a "clean job" can be accurately determined.

The Pierrepoint demeanor in office is also strictly tradition-bound. All have maintained the utmost secrecy in their official lives and lived ultraconservative home lives. They mingle quietly but freely with their neighbors near Manchester, slipping unobtrusively from the scene whenever the home office says the word.

If collecting final restitution from Nazis gives Pierrepoint more satisfaction than from the ordinary run-of-the-mill murderer, it does not reflect in his work or demeanor. But the prospect of such steady employment cannot be totally ignored.

Moslems Term Vote Mandate

BOMBAY, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Mahomed Ali Jinnah, president of the Moslem League, said Sunday the results of recent Central Assembly elections constituted a "clear verdict of Moslem India in favor of the Pakistan demand."

In a statement, Jinnah said official returns showed that Moslem League candidates won all of the 30 Moslem seats in the Central Assembly election which were contested by Moslems who ran under the Congress party and other banners.

The Moslem League demands that two groups of provinces, where the Moslem population is in the majority, be divorced from the Hindu provinces and recognized as forming the independent, sovereign country of Pakistan. The Congress party opposes this demand, contending it weakens India's chances for independence.

technical or scientific matters, nor were we asked by the Soviet government about the new weapon," he declared.

"I was happy to find that the Soviet government feels as we do that this particular weapon is of such a revolutionary nature that we should explore through a United Nations commission methods of international control."

ATOM SHIELDED

The secretary obviously was aware that Moscow decisions on atomic energy had raised questions among congressmen and senators as to whether the U. S. might be asked to turn over any "know how" to the projected commission before safeguards were established.

In that connection, he made these points:

1. Commission powers will consist of making inquiries and recommendations but no government will be bound to act on those suggestions.

2. The matter of safeguards will apply to commission recommendations "in relation to every phase of the subject and at every stage," and lies "at the root of the whole matter."

3. Neither the U. S. nor any other nation would be expected to share its armament secrets until it was certain that "effective safeguards had been developed to insure our mutual protection."

RED SUGGESTIONS

Russia offered "only a few amendments" to the British-American proposal, and these were accepted "with some reservations," Byrnes said.

He added that the amendments went "no further than appropriate" to enable the United Nations security council—under which the atomic commission will be set up—to exercise "its primary responsibility for the maintenance of peace and security."

The secretary reiterated a statement he made before leaving Moscow by asserting that the conference communique covered all subjects on which agreement was reached "apart from instructions to the representatives of the three governments to facilitate agreements in the field."

In reviewing the other conference agreements, Byrnes made these points:

1. The agreement under which a 21-nation peace conference will be called not later than May 1, 1946, meets U. S. insistence that "all states which took an active part in the war should participate in the peace."

OPEN ON BULGAR TOPIC

2. He was not entirely satisfied with the agreements under which Romania and Bulgaria will broaden their governments to gain U. S. and British recognition, but hopes they will substantially improve "the democratic character" of those regimes.

3. The arrangement to establish a Korean provisional government under a Russian-American commission reflects Allied determination to "hasten the day when Korea will become an independent member of the society of nations."

4. Russia and Britain expressed "substantial accord" with President Truman's recent policy directive to Gen. George C. Marshall on the necessity for a unified, peaceful, democratic China.

Byrnes expressed the belief that the Moscow decisions "should bring hope to the war-weary people of many lands."

He said he had suggested the conference, fully aware of the risk of another impasse like the one which ended the London meeting of Big Five foreign ministers in September.

"I felt this risk had to be taken," he said. "It is just when there are genuine difficulties in reaching agreement that foreign secretaries should meet in an effort to understand each other's problems and troubles."

WLB Reported Approving Wage Increase to WU

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The War Labor Board has decided to recommend a wage increase averaging 12 cents an hour for 50,000 Western Union employes due to strike on Jan. 7, it was learned authoritatively Sunday.

W. L. Allen, president of the AFL Commercial Telegraphers Union, representing about 40,000 of the workers, said his group wanted to read the board's decision before commenting on whether the strike will be carried through or abandoned.

Allen said the reported decision was "very encouraging," however.

The decision, together with an opinion by Edwin E. White, public member, is expected to come down Monday, the board's last day before going out of existence.

The company and the union had agreed by stipulation to be bound by the board's recommendation. The union had appealed from a directive of Oct. 17, which granted the AFL workers a four-cent hourly increase. The board agreed to reconsider after the AFL protested that the WLB had failed to "live up to its responsibilities" in the case.

The AFL unions—four federal labor unions are involved with the CTU—would benefit from the proposed recommendations, including the establishment of a 55-cent hourly minimum for messengers and others receiving as low as 40 cents.

In a companion decision affecting 7,000 members of the CIO-American Communications Association in the Metropolitan New York area, the board revised its New York regional board's previous directive, according to CIO sources close to the WLB.

The regional board's order, allowing a minimum 10 cents hourly increase and setting up two schedules of adjustment by which additional wage boosts could be granted, was appealed by the company.

The national board, according to CIO sources, decided to amend that order to knock out the 10-cent hourly increase and other increases permitted under schedule B of the regional order.

However, schedule A, which would be retained, would allow increases averaging more than 12 cents an hour, a CIO representative said.

MINE YIELDS FIFTH BODY—Mine Rescue workers remove the body of Hobart Sulfridge, one of the five known dead as the result of last Wednesday's explosion in the Straight Creek Coal Company's mine near Pineville, Ky.

Five Known Dead as Fire Halts Hunt for 19 Entombed Miners

PINEVILLE, Ky., Dec. 30.—(AP) The death toll in a coal mine explosion near here last Wednesday morning mounted to at least five Sunday as one of the men carried out alive Friday died Sunday afternoon.

Late Sunday afternoon fire, fumes and smoke again drove all rescue workers from the damaged Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company's No. 1 mine and officials said it might be hours before the volunteers could re-enter the pit with any degree of safety. Nineteen or more miners are still unaccounted for in the wrecked tunnel.

Tom McQueen, 30, Magnet, Ky., died in the Pineville community hospital about 2 p. m. (CST) Sunday without regaining consciousness. He was married but had no children.

He was one of the nine miners found alive in the fire-swept pit more than 53 hours after the unexplained explosion trapped 31 or more men about 8:30 a. m. Wednesday. Albert Bennett, 64, Pineville, died before he could be brought to the surface. McQueen was the last of the eight survivors carried out of the tunnel and he was in an oxygen tent until he died.

Experienced miners held little hope for the survival of the 19 or more men still unaccounted for but the rescue work did not slacken.

Late Saturday night word was sent up that four bodies had been found but Sunday officials said this was a mistake — three, not four, were found.

The bodies of Mine Foreman Nath Centers, 62, and Hobart Sulfridge, 44, were brought out of the mine Sunday morning. They were badly burned but were identified by company officials and relatives. Both were married and Centers had three children and Sulfridge five.

There was no announcement about the identification of the body which had not been brought out of the tunnel.

Two of the dead were found on their knees and there was evidence that they had dragged themselves several feet. They were badly burned.

The seven survivors, all reported doing well at the hospital here, were Charles Lingar, 30, Four Mile, Ky.; Bud Townes, 52, a Pineville Negro who survived a similar mine explosion in 1929 in which 16 men were killed; Bill Branstutter, 41, and John H. Branstutter, 44, Pineville brothers; Ivan Philpot, 51, Pineville; Joe Hatfield, 40, Pineville, and Huey Miller, 31, Four Mile.

Bennett's funeral will be held here Monday.

A relief fund has been started to aid the victims' families and Mayor J. M. Brooks, of Pineville, is chairman.

Harry Thomas, chief engineer for the State Department of Mines and Minerals, said an investigation of the disaster would be made after all rescue work is completed. He said he would name a board to make the inspection.

Thomas has not commented on reports from Washington that the Federal Bureau of Mines and the United Mine Workers of America union magazine had criticized conditions in the Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company mine.

However, W. E. Lewis, president of the company, said Sunday he considered the mine had been in the best shape it ever was in and that improvements had been made at the suggestion of the State Department of Mines and Minerals.

These improvements, he added, included a new fan for the ventilating system and a new tipple.

His company took over operation of the mine in 1925, Lewis said, and since then had a record of only one fatal accident up to the time of Wednesday's explosion. He said his opinion about what caused the explosion would be only a guess.

HITLER

"will go to her death with me at her own wish as my wife."

And, because the German people supposedly had been ignorant all along that Hitler and Eva had lived together for years, Hitler was able to say self-pityingly:

COMPENSATION

"This will compensate us for what we both lost through my work in the service of my people."

Those passages were in his personal will, in which he attempted to absolve himself of guilt for the looting of Europe's priceless art treasures, by saying he wanted them, not for himself, but to establish a "picture gallery in my hometown of Linz-on-Danube."

Hitler appointed his deputy fuehrer, Martin Bormann, as executor of his personal will, adding:

"He is permitted to hand over to my relatives everything which is of value as a personal memento or is necessary for maintaining a petit bourgeois (lower middle-class) standard of living especially to my wife's mother and my faithful fellow workers of both sexes who are well know to him."

2,000 WORDS

The personal will was short, but the political testament ran some 2,000 words. It contained all the main propaganda themes.

"It is untrue," the testament said, "that I or anybody else in Germany wanted war in 1939. It was wanted and provoked exclusively by those international statesmen who were either of Jewish origin or worked for Jewish interests."

That theme was repeated often throughout the testament, its frequency matched only by the number of times Hitler stressed that he was dying for the Nazi cause.

He named a fight-to-the-death cabinet, headed by Doenitz, Goebbels and Bormann and including a number of lesser party underlords.

Hitler asked them all to leave Berlin to carry on the fight. But Goebbels, in his own testament, said: "For the first time in my life I must categorically refuse."

Explaining his decision to die in Berlin, Hitler said he wanted to share the fate of millions of other Germans who were killed in defending the besieged city, but he also added:

A NEW SPECTACLE

"Further, I shall not fall into the hands of the enemy who requires a new spectacle, presented by the Jews, to divert their hysterical masses."

British intelligence authorities said there were three copies of Hitler's testaments—one for Doenitz, one intended for Field Marshal Ferdinand von Schoerner, who headed the last stand of the German forces in Czechoslovakia, and the third as an extra copy.

One copy was discovered in the British zone sewn in the clothes of a messenger who was to have delivered it. It was not disclosed whose copy that was, nor when it was found.

Two copies of the will were typed on heavy bond paper with the name Adolf Hitler and a silver swastika at the top. The description of Hitler's marriage was hastily typed on plain bond paper, with no seals nor stamps. All the documents showed signs of water stains, and some of the signatures were blurred.

American intelligence officers said there might be more arrests of Nazis as a result of the discovery of the documents in a battered old suitcase in the Bavarian village of Villshofen the day after Christmas.

In charge of the investigation in the American zone was Col. Edward M. Fickett, Austin, Tex., who headed the mechanized cavalry force known as "Task Force Fickett" in Gen. Patton's Third Army.

MISPLACED TRUST IS CASH LOSS

Bitten by the hand that fed him, Bryan Parks, of 776 Lexington avenue, S. W., was minus a good suit, overcoat and $130 in cash Saturday night.

Parks told City Detectives P. B. Green and J. H. Langley he had been in the lobby of a downtown hotel and said he met a man who invited him up to his room for a few drinks.

He said he went to sleep for a while, and when he awakened the man was gone, taking all Parks' clothes with him, leaving an old worn suit in return.

quantity of loot in Eatonton, Ga. Among the articles recovered was property stolen from the automobile of Frank Niklas, of River Forest, Ill., parked outside the Capital City Club on Oct. 27. Niklas and his bride, the former Miss Patricia Jones, of 2260 Peachtree road, were at the time attending their wedding reception inside the club. They reported the loss of clothing and other articles valued at $2,162.

The police also recovered part of the loot, valued at $889, stolen from the car of Sgt. Constantine Copanas while it was parked on Ellis street on Dec. 21.

The property recovered and now at police headquarters includes radios, assorted Christmas presents, blankets, electric heaters, shotguns, jewelry, clothing and other articles.

New GI Bill May Up Taxes By 15 Billion

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—(UP) By signing the revised GI Bill of Rights President Truman may have added as much as 10 to 15 billion dollars to the future tax bill.

And that sum is just a starter on the overall bill for veterans' benefits of World War II. The figure is so high Veterans' Administration budget experts won't even guess at it.

Omar Ketchum, legislative director of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said Sunday night that in the next 25 years World War II benefits may cost 100 billion dollars.

Since the revolutionary War and through fiscal 1945, relief for veterans of all wars has cost 28 billion dollars. The current fiscal year, alone, will boost this figure by four billion.

Next year VA's budget will jump to five billion and that figure will be duplicated or increased in the several following years.

Thus VA will spend as much in the next half dozen years as it and its predecessor agencies spent in 150.

The annual Veterans' Administration bill will far exceed what the whole government spent, say, in fiscal year 1930, when the U. S. budget was $3,440,268,884.

The rise in veterans' benefits parallels closely the rise in magnitude and cost of wars. World War II cost around 300 billion dollars. It produced 12 million veterans, compared to four million in World War II.

The GI Bill, with its free education, loan guarantees, and unemployment compensation — all new in the history of veterans' benefits—was originally estimated to cost from eight to 10 billion dollars.

Ketchum said that estimate might now be raised to 15 billion, with new allowances for GI pupils and with the possibility that more veterans than originally contemplated might take advantage of the $20 weekly unemployment allowances.

Penicillin Used To Treat Heart

BELFAST, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Prof. J. H. Biggart, dean of medicine at Queen's University, has announced an apparent cure in 12 patients of bacterial endocarditis by penicillin treatment, the British Press Association said.

Bacterial endocarditis is a disease characterized by the growth of an organism on the heart valves and victims usually die within two years, the professor was quoted as saying.

First Banana Imports In 5 Years for England

BRISTOL, England, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The first boatload of bananas in five years arrived Sunday at Avonmouth along with 14,000 cases of oranges and four Jamaican stowaways, two of whom dived overboard a mile from shore and were not immediately apprehended.

Officers of the ship, the SS Talarpa, said the four were discovered shortly after the craft left Jamaica, where more than 90,000 stems of green bananas were loaded.

Butter Price Boost Makes U. S. Surplus Sales Profit

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Surplus food sold thus far has brought the government a profit of $1,379,000 as a result of the recent boost in the price of butter.

The Surplus Property Administration reported this Sunday in announcing that of $13,000,000,000 of all kinds of goods declared surplus through this year in the United States, less than half of one per cent was in food and agricultural products.

SPA said that of $60,000,000 of food thus far designated surplus, the Agricultural Department has disposed of $17,450,000 of it for a return of $18,829,000 by Nov. 30.

"The profitable return," SPA explained, "was due to the OPA increase in butter prices which increased the return on government-owned surplus butter."

ONE CENT INCREASE

Butter price ceilings were increased five to six cents a pound Nov. 1, to compensate processors for elimination of a government subsidy.

The Agriculture Department, SPA reported, expects no difficulty in disposing of the balance of the $60,000,000 of food "as promptly as it can be graded and inspected."

SPA said the largest single item of food on hand currently is $22,731,982 of frozen eggs of the type used by bakers.

Other surplus food stocks located in the country include $2,638,821 of canned pineapple, $1,721,406 of pineapple juice, $1,122,496 (without domestic tax) of cigarets, $4,500,000 of peanuts, and about $1,000,000 of candy bars and other packed items.

Of the total food surplus, SPA said War Department declarations have amounted to about $53,000,000, the Navy about $3,000,000, and the War Surplus Administration's $3,541,000.

OVERSEAS SURPLUS SMALL

Surplus food stocks overseas, owned principally by the War Department, "have been kept small by the Army policy of shifting food from inactive theaters to localities where it is needed," SPA said.

The agency added that only nominal amounts of food are expected to be declared surplus in the future.

All food declared surplus in foreign countries has been used for relief and rehabilitation, SPA reported. It said that "very limited amounts" which have been available in Europe have been sold to UNRRA and other relief agencies.

Two shiploads of 10,000 tons of wheat and wheat flour which were in transit to the Pacific before V-2 Day were sold to UNRRA for China relief, while some $12,50,000 of surplus Army field rations recently were sold for distribution in the Philippines.

James H. Kelley Given New Post With Southern

James H. Kelley, commercial agent of the Southern Railway System, with headquarters at Atlanta, will be appointed to the newly-established position of commercial agent at Gainesville, Ga., effective on Jan. 1, according to an announcement made by A. L. Day, the railway's assistant freight traffic manager at Atlanta.

Kelley will have jurisdiction over freight traffic matters of the Southern at Gainesville and on the line of the Gainesville Midland Railroad, including Athens, it was announced.

Kelley was born at Atlanta May 27, 1910, and attended Emory University. He entered the service of the Southern as a clerk in the general freight office at Atlanta in March, 1928, where he served in various clerical positions until his appointment as freight traffic representative in November, 1940. He returned to Atlanta as freight traffic representative in July, 1941, and was promoted to commercial agent on Jan. 1, 1945. During the war he was assigned as a troop train escort.

The World Looks to the U. S.

The United Nations expressed their faith in the United States by choosing this nation as the site of the permanent UNO. In the coming months they may have added reason to justify this selection.

It will mean that the United States is committed to full participation in world security, with no weakening reservations such as congress imposed on our work in the old League of Nations.

It will mean that the discussions of world problems in the United States will tend to make our people more international-minded. We lacked that, unfortunately, when previous tribunes were sitting at The Hague or at Geneva.

The first general assembly of the UNO will be held Jan. 10. Already, there is much speculation on the choice of leaders, particularly the secretary-general and the president. Within the next few weeks we will read about personalities heretofore buried in the foreign news notes. For instance, we may become familiar with Lester B. (Mike) Pearson, Canadian ambassador to the United States, who is a leading choice for secretary-general. Or, we might know more about Paul-Henry Spaak, of Belgium, who is being mentioned both as secretary-general and as president, or E. N. Van Kleffens, of the Netherlands, who is considered a strong candidate for secretary-general. Outstanding candidates for president of UNO assembly include Trygve Lie, of Norway; Jan Masaryk, of Czechoslovakia, and Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, of Australia.

The Americans' love for politics, plus the proximity of the UNO deliberations, should instill nation-wide enthusiasm in the assembly. If, as a result, the United States erases her traditional record of aloofness from world planning, the choice of the United States as the UNO site will have been a brilliant maneuver.

One Lynching Too Many

Tuskegee Institute, which carefully keeps a record of lynchings in the United States, a duty continued across many years, reports that in 1945 there was one lynching in the United States.

In Florida a mob, using a key to the jail, took a Negro farm hand out and lynched him. He had been accused of criminal assault.

That is, comparatively, a good record. In 1944 there were two lynchings; in 1943 there were three; in 1942 there were five, and in 1941 there were two.

One lynching, however, is a bad record. The Negro was in jail. He could not escape the processes of law. There was no reason for the mob to take the law out of the hands of the courts, which are the protection of America, and itself commit murder.

One lynching is a shameful blot on a year which saw the world in victorious struggle against a philosophy of violence and defiance of justice and law.

The south has had no real racial troubles, though many have predicted it would and some demagogues have desired for it to have.

Let every thoughtful man and woman make it their duty to try and create such public opinion that violence and lynchings may not occur at all in 1946. It can be done. There is no reason for "trouble" or violence. There are legal ways, peaceful ways, American ways, to settle problems and to deal with crime.

Let us do it that way.

A Forward Step in Agriculture

Georgia has been made more and more aware of the fact that all her wealth, all her cities, all her future rest upon the farms of the state.

Many persons have sought to improve the agriculture of the state. No person has worked more earnestly, more intelligently or more boldly in that direction than Cason Callaway. It was he who conceived the idea of 100 groups of businessmen buying and improving 100 farms of 100 acres each. It will mean, when the plan is completed, that $1,000,000 will have been put into the improvement of those farms. Their influence will be felt all about them.

Now comes the announcement that the farm industry department of the Trust Company of Georgia and its affiliated banks are to finance through the board of regents of the University of Georgia a moving picture in color depicting the hundred demonstration farms' efforts toward bettering agriculture in the state. This will be shown to civic clubs, county agents, 4-H clubs, Future Farmers of America, and all others interested in agriculture. Farming communities will be able to obtain the film for showing in their schools or community centers. It is a forward step and The Constitution, an original admirer of the 100-farm idea and of its "father," salutes this new step which will mean so much in spreading knowledge and inspiration.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

The Constitution welcomes letters from its readers. They must be signed, should not exceed 200 words.

Dirty Town

Editor Constitution: Recently I have returned to Atlanta for the first time since before the war. The excessively dirty condition of the streets was the first thing I noticed. In fact, they are the dirtiest of any city I've ever been in! I was surprised at the total lack of civic pride in that respect in a city otherwise so interesting and enjoyable to live in.

Enough wire baskets for each corner of main intersections and at other strategic places should be provided. They should be emptied each day without fail and not allowed to overflow. Storekeepers and businesses might find that frequent sweeping of the sidewalks would reduce the dirt tracked into their places.

People will use the sidewalk trash baskets once they know that a determined effort to keep Atlanta clean is being made by city authorities.

Daily cleaning of each downtown street by a larger and more conscientious force of men is the greatest need.

These improvements will result in a healthier and better-looking, more progressive Atlanta.

WILLIAM C. WEAVER JR.

One Vote

Editor Constitution: Possible irregularities in official acts of the county commissioners are not the consequence of criminal behavior. The committee of citizens investigating county affairs has been largely discredited. If an election were held where any five members of the citizens' committee oppose our commissioners, I would vote to retain the incumbent officials.

Patton

Editor Constitution: That was a wonderful article Ralph McGill wrote on Gen. Patton. I am moved to add a few things to what Mr. McGill has said, especially as my father was a Confederate officer under Gen. Longstreet, and I also had two uncles who fought in the War Between the States with Gen. Jubal A. Early, under whom Gen. Patton's grandfather fought in the beautiful Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. I recall as a small boy attending Gen. Early's funeral at Springhill cemetery in Lynchburg, Va., and with boyish wonder listening to the famous Stonewall Jackson Band playing that grand old hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," and thinking it possibly inappropriate as old Jubal was one of the most profane of all the Confederate generals.

I am quite sure that Gen. Patton, probably the most aggressive, certainly the most spectacular, hard-hitting, offensive fighter the war which has just ended developed, took some lessons from Stonewall Jackson or Early or others of that marvelous array of great generals which the South produced and which Abraham Lincoln experienced such difficulty in matching.

Patton is gone. Requiescat in pace. In the soil made red by the blood of brave Americans whom he led to victory, let him rest until the resurrection morn.

GEORGE C. MOSELEY.

Crime

Editor Constitution: Please accept my sincere appreciation for the splendid article "While on the Subject of Christmas." We of the Salvation Army have long been interested in corrective treatment for both juvenile and adult offenders. We can, I think, point with pardonable pride to some contribution toward modern penology.

With this background of interest and activity, we can appreciate to the full your comments upon the staggering crime record and your comment on the fact so well known to those interested that "punishment and imprisonment, based on the principle of retribution" has had little effect upon the protection of society and the rehabilitation of those who have engaged in violations of laws designed to protect society.

Yes, indeed, "the crime records should be part of our Christmas thinking."

Hardshell

Editor Constitution: I was very much amused at the editorial in The Constitution this morning: "Please, Mr. Truman, Don't Do It Again." They tell me that our President is a Baptist (perhaps "Hardshell") and you surely are aware that the Baptists believe that "whatever is going to be will be whether it ever bees or not." I'm not so sure but that you Presbyterians believe that doctrine a little bit yourself, eh? Well, anyway, our President got to Missouri and back to Washington okay. You see he's from Missouri, and not only has to be shown but also shows the rest of us how it is done.

The Statue Stands Up Straighter

"Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses, yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore;
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed, to me;
I lift my lamp beside the golden door."

You may read that on the base of the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor.

You thought of that when President Harry Truman announced at Christmas time that he had ordered immigration quotas to be filled with persons who have been driven from their homes.

Most of the 900 refugees at Camp Oswego, in New York state, will be allowed to remain and be admitted under the immigration quotas.

The President kept congress in mind. Obviously, too, he kept the individuals in mind. Some of them have been damning the shades of the late President Roosevelt with dire predictions the refugees would never return to Europe, as was the agreement at the time they were allowed to find asylum in this country.

This will give them a new chance to belabor Mr. Roosevelt, and we may expect them to lay to with a will. Their briskets will swell and grow warm with self-adulation. We may expect a ringing "I told you so," with a few snide allusions to foreigners.

Mr. Truman patently made clear a few facts for the benefit of these persons.

No extra persons are to be admitted. The President took pains to remind the senate—which adopted in its last hours before the holidays a resolution calling, in ringing terms, for the end of butter rationing (said rationing having been lifted a month before) —that he was not even asking that the quotas be liberalized. They are the same old quotas.

He made it plain the plan will not cost the taxpayers a dollar; that nothing in it would delay the return of a single American soldier or his wife or child.

All Mr. Truman did was to restrict the immigration quotas to those persons who are refugees. He suggested, properly, that as many as possible be orphaned children who could come and grow up in America. At the most it means only 39,000 persons per year.

It must have made many Americans wince to know that it was necessary to sell this idea with the assertion that assisting to relieve human misery would "not cost us a cent."

If the Statue of Liberty enlightening the world, in New York harbor, quivered once or twice, I think I can understand. The reference on the base is to the golden door of hope, not to the golden calf.

Opportunity This was, said the President, an opportunity for the United States to set the example for the rest of the world in alleviating human suffering.

It was a great and decent act by the President of a country which needs to be reminded, now and then, how it was settled; how many seeds blow from the fields of persecution and misery in old Europe to grow in this country; what it wrote on the base of its Statue of Liberty.

It was an opportunity, and the President acted properly. Too often in the past we, and other nations, when confronted with a problem of human misery, have given it the old Bert Williams brush-off:

"It's a great opportunity for somebody—
Somebody else—not me."

Not many immigrants have come into America since the war began in Europe. We have adhered to our quotas. Fortunately, the refugees were, by and large, persons of better-than-average intelligence and skill. Nothing dreadful has happened. A report has just been released by the Public Affairs Committee:

"They have had a beneficial influence upon this country out of proportion to their numbers. They have had a stimulating effect upon the economic and cultural life of the nation.

"In business, they have started new types of enterprises, stimulated existing ones and developed new markets. In industry, they have introduced new processes and produced articles hitherto unknown or not manufactured here. In both these fields, they have brought in capital and created job opportunities for Americans.

"In the field of arts and letters, they have introduced new forms of expression and significant works; in drama, they have created many outstanding and successful plays and motion pictures; in scholarship, they have extended the bounds of knowledge; in science, they have made important discoveries."

Mr. Truman's order makes it possible to select the more desirable ones—to the number of 39,000 each year. This will not "flood us" or "overwhelm us"; will not "take our jobs."

I recall a Polish girl and her mother whom I met in Tehran, Iran. Both now are in America. I am quite sure they will be better Americans and be of more genuine value to America than the entire membership of the K. K. K., the Paul Reveres and other 100 percenters who, rather immodestly and without any divine fire, assert that God is on their side in declaring who is a good American and who isn't. I am sure the same sort of evaluation could be made of many others who have come to this country, knowing by trial of fire and death and misery how sweet and precious are liberty and freedom.

I imagine the old girl in the harbor is standing a bit straighter and her lamp burns brighter.

RALPH T. JONES

There's Another Date For the History Books

After today, the numeral 1945 ceases to be something to write at the head of your correspondence and becomes, instead, one more date for the students in the history classes to memorize.

That date, 1945, will always be the answer to many questions on the examination papers of the future:

When did the Second World War end?
When did Franklin Delano Roosevelt die?
When did man first use atomic force?
And so on. Many questions with the same answer.

The year now closing has been an important one in man's affairs. Few, if any, have witnessed so many events of world-wide interest.

Yet, as one more twelvemonth goes into the realm of history, we well may wonder if the memorizing of dates related to so-called "big" events is the correct way to study and to understand history.

For, truth to tell, it is not the "big" events which can be dated, but the slow-moving story of humanity in the whole, of man's relation to man, which is history. It is the slow movement, going on always, through peace and war, through prosperity and privation, through floods and droughts, through days of fear and days of happiness, that marks the progress of mankind. That is the movement toward the realization of the everlasting dream of world-wide brotherhood and tolerance one for the other.

Your Contribution And so, as we attempt to evaluate the year just gone, we may appropriately consider our own, individual, contribution to its achievement.

How have you lived during the year?

Have you known deep sorrow? Have you suffered privation? Have you lacked many of the things modern man considers necessary to decent life?

Or have you prospered? Have you known moments of supreme happiness? Have you enjoyed all those things which make life more pleasant?

Answer those questions first. Then wipe them and the answers away. For not yet have you delved to the truth that really counts.

Then ask yourself if, because of your presence during the year, someone else has been made happier, more content, a better individual unit in the community. Answer that in the affirmative and you are getting close to the real question, the root of all life.

That question is, has your own spirit become finer, more understanding, more closely attuned to the universal spirit which found its most perfect earthly expression in the teachings of Christ?

If, by your life and thought during 1945, by your helpfulness to others, your closer approach to fundamental truth, you are nearer today, to understanding the real brotherhood, then you have contributed to the importance, in real history, of 1945.

Passing Worries We are faced, today, with material worries that seem overwhelming.

Our sons and our husbands have returned, or are returning, from the great sacrificial experience of war. Many of them are not finding, back home, the realization of their dreams.

Many cannot find a proper place to live, because of the perplexing housing shortage.

Some have not found the type they had hoped to obtain. Some have found the people of home—the wife, the sweetheart, the family—fall short of the idealized imaginings of their foxhole dreams.

Yet, in final analysis, all these things are secondary in importance. For they are of the material world. And true men remain true men regardless of the storms of material discomfort which buffet them.

It is a blessing, to be sure, if today you live in contented security, in a comfortable home, instead of in the mud and cold of an open field of war.

Yet external things have not changed you.

If you were a man, in the foxhole of 1944, you are the same man today, whether you be living in luxury, sheltering in a shack or fretting out your time waiting for that discharge and transportation home.

Her Choice

ROBERT QUILLEN

Human Nature

When the west was wild, every new mining camp lived through a period of complete anarchy. There were many partnerships, but no other kind of organization or co-operation.

Of course there were conflicting ideas, claims and interests; and since there was no higher authority to insure fairness, each man had to depend upon his own knife or gun to defend his rights and his property.

In such circumstances, fights were inevitable and frequent—and often fatal. It is simply beyond the capacity of human nature to live in peace where there is no law or authority to provide security, and justice can be obtained only by drawing and firing before the other man does.

A similar situation, on a large scale, developed soon after the American Colonies won their freedom from England.

Each regarded itself as an independent nation. The people of one state regarded the people of another as foreigners, and frankly expressed contempt for their manners, dialect and customs. Each state made its own laws without thought for the welfare of the others. They were not only competitors but often antagonists.

War was inevitable. It was only a matter of time until envy, prejudice and conflicting interests would lead to suicidal warfare. Neighboring states cannot live in peace when the welfare of one seems to depend upon injury to another, and there is no higher authority to compose their differences and allay their fears.

Fortunately, America possessed some of the wisest statesmen known to history, and these prevented economic ruin and eventual war by forming the states into a nation and persuading them to surrender part of their "sovereignty" to the central government.

We know the record and we know how human nature functions. No amount of wishful thinking and no avoidance of reality can change the fact that war between nations is inevitable so long as each is its own supreme law and must depend upon its own strength for justice and survival.

The atomic bomb changes nothing. With or without it we must become one world, under universal law, or be prepared for another war. If we fool ourselves, we shall invite destruction.

GEORGIA EDITORS SAY:

SHOULD MAKE PROTEST

(Lowndes County News)

We people living down here in the turnip raising country should make a protest to the syndicates releasing the comics. First, Popeye makes spinach popular as a food (with some people, not with me) and is responsible for tremendous sales. Now, along comes Dick Tracy trying to put a crimp into turnips when any person with any sense knows turnips are more nutritious and much more delectable than spinach. Just what are they trying to do to the best pot-likker-making vegetable on the market?

OPA NEEDED

(Quitman Free Press)

Our idea of biting the hand that feeds you is to complain about OPA price regulations. It is impossible to ration food and fix fair prices without some inconvenience and inequality, but it is nothing compared with the wholesale gouging and hoarding that would have gone on without regulation. Hoarding and black markets would have created a terrible situation. As it is everyone has had enough to eat and for the most part has paid a fair price. The shortage of sugar has not hurt anyone, for all of us eat too much of all sorts of sweets. It is indecent to complain about such things when so large a part of the world is practically starving.

Get Them Today ---Cash and Carry

This is a word of warning: This is the last day you can purchase manhole covers at ceiling prices.

Promptly at 12:01 tomorrow morning, the lid is off.

OPA has relented in the face of pressure from the nation's foundries and lifted ceilings on manhole covers. But OPA is hardly to blame—manhole cover makers carry a lot of weight.

OPA stepped into the breach early in the war when word got around that manhole covers were scarce . . . only one to a manhole, in fact.

Human nature being what it is, people who had never given manhole covers a first, much less a second thought, suddenly developed a yen for them. The price, following the age-old law of supply and demand, skyrocketed as ingenious collectors devised new uses for them, as centerpieces, book-ends, chandeliers, and what-nots.

But even after OPA slapped on the ceilings, one could hear mysterious muffled clankings in the silence of the night as the black market in manhole covers flourished surreptitiously.

Now, however, restrictions are to be lifted and legitimate dealers can charge whatever the manhole cover market will bear. The public will have to pay more but at least those strong-arm squads of manhole coverleggers will be forced back to their piano-moving.

DOROTHY THOMPSON

Discusses the British Loan

Without having had time to make a study of the terms of the proposed credits to Great Britain, beyond the information which has appeared in the newspapers, it is clear that the American negotiators have not granted the British all they hoped for, and have extracted concessions which the British were originally most reluctant to give.

Although the proposed credits cannot be considered except in the framework of the general political and economic condition and situation of the world, they represent a business deal on a business basis. Annual payments must be made and there are no waiver privileges.

But apart from business terms, there is no alternative than to bolster the British economy, if, first, we intend to meet our moral obligations, and, second, to support world economy against totalitarian socialization.

Britain's economic crisis is the result of having, for more than a full year, carried the burden of the war almost alone, and most of the financial burden from its outbreak until lend-lease. The proposed loan is almost exactly equal to the sum Britain spent in the United States, during the period of cash-and-carry. Specifically, Britain spent 3.5 billions here, and receives now a credit of 3.75 billions. The rest of the 4.4 billions is an adjustment of lend-lease on materials already shipped to Britain during the war.

The money spent here really saved our lives after we were attacked at Pearl Harbor, for the American war industry was built on British orders. Had we depended on the orders of our own War Department to build the industries, we would have had no airplane industry, for instance, when we were attacked. In 1940 we had reached a point, where, as I recall it, United Aircraft would have had to consider closing the factories except for British orders.

It was the expenditures in these years which exhausted Britain's foreign holdings.

Bolster Socialism The argument has been made, and will be made, that credits now will only bolster British Socialism. One must then ask, with what countries can we co-operate where that argument will not be even more applicable than with the Soviet Union, which has a complete foreign trade monopoly managed by a single-party dictatorship which can also, if it likes, play politics with finances? Europe is moving toward at least as much Socialism as Britain, and is so impoverished and destroyed that it is likely to be a relief burden rather than anything else for years to come—not only because of the destructiveness of the war, but because of the political and economic atomization, to which our crazy postwar policies are notably contributing.

This happens to be pertinent to British credits. For unless Europe can be rationally reconstructed, both politically and economically, Britain cannot recover even with our loans. British trade—essential to British economic existence—has been almost equally divided into three parts: (1)—With the empire and commonwealth, where the terms of the credits now restrict empire preference, (2)—with continental Europe, and (3) with the rest of the world. The outlook for prosperous commerce with Asia is very dark for the time being, and continental Europe is out of the picture altogether, and will be until policies are revised.

Mistake It is a great mistake for the United States to believe that it can dragoon the social systems of countries by financial blackmail, or that dependency on America—and on American terms—is the only way out for the rest of the world. In extremes all countries have alternatives to becoming financial colonies or perishing.

Germany, under Hitler, operated a barter economy at great advantage to herself and great disadvantage to us. There is always more than one way of skinning a cat.

The Soviet Union, which has extended her totalitarian economy, for which barter is eminently fitted, to include Greater Poland with the German-Silesian industries, highly industrialized Czechoslovakia, and Jugoslavia and Rumania with their rich resources, can offer any European country, if pushed too far, ways out, however distasteful they may be.

The idea of dragooning left-of-center governments, like the British—or the recently overthrown Italian Parri government—rightwards by financial pressures is likely to have just the opposite effect, in the long run. Both Fascism and Communism raised the slogan of the have-nots against the haves, and of subservience to plutocratic powers. The only country that can possibly be so described today needs to watch its steps, and operate with vision and generosity beyond the ordinary counting room.

Some Old Friends Find New Homes

It falls to our lot today to begin the dispersal of some of our pets and this is always a difficult and heart-touching thing to do. Aside from the professional handlers of small animals, we have probably given away more dogs and cats than most anybody. Without doubt, our numbers run into the hundreds. Its been a sort of general understanding here at Yellow River that dogs and cats and other pets, and indeed, the wild creatures and even individual trees, have personalities, and without being too sentimental about it, we have tried to bring out the best in all of them. To the extent of our abilities, we have made them feel at home. Of course, it is not possible to keep all of the puppies and kittens which come along in the course of events, with the result that ever so often one must set about the dissolution of the family. There is so much kindness in the human race that there is never any difficulty in finding homes for animals.

OUR PROBLEM today is a problem of the heart, entirely. We just hate to part with anyone of them. For they will have as good or better home in the future than they have had in the past. "Dinty's" lone kitten goes to a family which has wanted it since they first set eyes on it, and where it will have for its buddy, a very kindly old Cocker spaniel, named "Freckles". The kitten's prospective family is in process of selecting a name for it. Two names vie for the honor; "Nagasaki Joe" and "A". Both have to do with the atomic bomb, which gives some idea of the personality of the kitten.

"FATSY PANTS" goes to Pleasant Valley plantation, where he will have more than a thousand acres of land to move around in. "Fatsy" is one of a litter of three Scotch terriers whose mother is our own "Missy" and whose pappy is a champion named "Derby," owned by Bruce Webb of Duneden, Florida. "Fatsy Pants" will likewise have companionship in his new home, for his owners are possessed of a grand Scottie, named, "Mac", a son of our own Mr. Burns. "Mac" is the friendliest Scottie we have ever known, and he and "Fatsy" should have grand times together.

OUR GOOD FRIEND, Jim Duncan, a Scotsman in his own right, has agreed to take over the raising and training of "Secondo", another of Missy's youngsters. Duncan is an official judge of dogs, by appointment of the American Kennel Club, and he thinks that this youngster may have show possibilities. Time, training and competition in the show ring will tell. The third member of the litter will remain here at Yellow River. We call him "Little Feller", after one of Frank Stanton's poems, and also because he is very small. He is not as strong as "Fatsy Pants" or "Secondo" and will need considerable looking after, but with Susie's good food and with Burns as his mentor, the "Little Feller" ought to come along all right.

While "Missy" will leave Yellow River, she will remain in the family. Athleen's own sister and niece, who have raised almost as many dogs as we have, are adopting and moving Missy to Atlanta It would not do to leave her much alone, here in the country. She is too trusting and too defenseless. Something terrible might happen to her.

BURNS, DINTY, Lee (the beagle), and the Little Feller will stay on with us here. All of us will miss our old friends. But in some measure, they, like their God-mother, who watched over them and loved them, will remain with us forever.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

Spelvin In Jeopardy

NEW YORK—President Truman, General Motors, the unions and all the rest of us have lost sight of the most important fact of all in the terrible fight for power now being waged by the C. I. O.

The fact is that George Spelvin, American, is a free human being.

Under the Roosevelt government an attempt was made to deliver him over to the unions. To a great extent the attempt succeeded in closed shop agreements and other contracts containing variations of the closed shop.

The government made a deal with the union movement whereby, in actual effect, Spelvin had to join the union covering his work or get off the job. The alternative, of course, meant destitution for his family so he submitted. But he submitted under protest.

Now what kind of organization is that which Spelvin's government made him join?

THE GOVERNMENT has been absolutely unconcerned about that. The government doesn't even examine the union's constitution. It doesn't require free, honest elections. It will not even regulate the amount of dues that he must pay or forbid the extortion of arbitrary assessments. If Spelvin is a Republican and the union is controlled by Communists he must contribute his share toward the overthrow of his government, and while the union has the power to bargain his wages upward, it also has the power to bargain them downward. It can get together with a whole industry and make terms of pay and conditions for work which forbid his advancement in life, restrict his output and his earnings and even shift him from plant to plant or from town to town, ignoring his feelings and his human rights entirely.

IT IS NO ANSWER to say that, of course, it is assumed that the unions will be conducted on "Democratic" principles. Spelvin knows and President Truman knows that there is no ground for any such assumption. They know that many of the unions are vile rackets, many are empires and many are ruthless and brutal dictatorships. They know that the rank and file individual has no more power to change them than the individual citizen has to change the government of the United States.

Now Citizen Spelvin never did grant to his government any right to drive him into any private association with starvation as the penalty for his refusal. In fact, even the vicious Wagner act, vicious because it was deliberately disguised as a benefit to Spelvin, did not dare say that Spelvin would have to join. It came at him wheedling. He was to be guaranteed the "right" to bargain collectively through agents of his own choice. That guarantee has been violated in millions of cases and the whole process has been an appalling fraud on the citizen.

THOSE MILLIONS have been forced to accept bargaining agents designated for them by the Labor Relations Board and to abide by the bargains negotiated by those agents without their consent. Furthermore, having been driven into these unions, these millions have had to submit to the most outrageous violations of their civic and human rights. The unions regulate their speech as well as their earnings. They collect income taxes with no compulsion to account for the money and they hold over those millions of Spelvins the power of economic punishment for the mere exercise of fundamental rights guaranteed by the constitution.

If Citizen Spelvin ever had granted the government the right to make him join these groups he certainly would have insisted that they be honestly conducted and that their powers be closely restricted to collective bargaining and no more, all under government supervision. But I doubt that, even with this promise, Spelvin ever would have conceded this right to his government because in that case the government would be his master whereas under the concept that he was taught from childhood, in our country, the people are the masters of the government.

NOW SPELVIN sees enormous unions trying to grab control of the management of the big industries. They already control him, even to the extent that he can be expelled from membership and run off the job for the common offense called "un-unionlike conduct," which means anything from the expression of a political opinion to refusal to contribute to a mansion for a bloated and panoplied parasite with royal inclinations. Should they control industry, too, they would want rigid order and firm discipline in the works just to simplify their problems of management. Spelvin can foresee that he would then be, truly, the common man. Perhaps that it what Henry Wallace wants him to be but he would no longer be George Spelvin, American.

Meanwhile, however, if you listen closely you will hear Citizen Spelvin muttering ominously, the way he does when he is on the point of fighting for his rights, to both the union and his government, "Take your damned dirty hands off me."

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE JR.

A Senator Looks at Congress

The following article by Robert M. LaFollette Jr., Progressive, Wisconsin, is reprinted from the Progressive.

The executive branch of the federal government has expanded and reorganized several times to meet new conditions. Congress has been struggling along, working harder than ever, with an organization and appropriations entirely inadequate to enable it to discharge its responsibilities in the complex economic environment of this age.

It is ironical that the congress should be so generous in providing adequate staff for the executive arm of the government, and yet so penurious in staffing itself with experts. The result is a woefully inadequate congressional control over departmental expenditures and policies.

However, the deficiencies of congressional activity are not due only to lack of sufficient appropriations. They go beyond that to the very organization of congress. The constantly growing body of executive or administrative law has become both a necessity to the operation of modern government and a threat to the constitutional function of congress as the legislative policy-making branch of the government.

1893 OR 1945?

Not since 1893 has the machinery of congress been overhauled.

National expenditures then were 3/10th of 1 per cent of what they are today.

Burdens upon individual congressmen are staggering.

Too many committees perform too many overlapping tasks.

Relations between congress and the executive branch are bad.

Relations between congress and the people are bad.

Old seniority rules keep good congressmen down and keep aging, inefficient ones in positions of power.

These are only some of the ways in which an 1893 setup creaks and groans under the demands of 1945.

Congress is an oxcart in the Age of the Atom.

Only congress can do anything about it.

Well, gentlemen?

IF CONTROL of governmental policy is to remain with the people's elected representatives, as the framers of the constitution intended it should, and not drift into the hands of a relatively irresponsible bureaucracy, congress will have to streamline its organization.

It is my conviction that reorganization and consolidation of the congressional committee structure is vital to an effective strengthening of the legislative branch of the government. There are too many committees now with uncertain and overlapping jurisdiction.

The senate has 33 standing committees with 400 committee assignments for its 96 members. In addition, there are usually about 10 special committees, so that it is not uncommon for a senator to serve on six or seven committees simultaneously.

Many of the major committees hold almost daily sessions for long periods at a time, so it frequently occurs that meetings conflict and that individual senators must choose between two or more of their committees which are working on important legislation at the same time and on the same day. It is not uncommon, either, for committees to be meeting simultaneously with sessions of the senate.

THE SAME situation prevails on the house side. There are 48 standing committees of the house with about 950 committee seats for 435 members. In addition, there are usually five or more special committees.

My own feeling is that the senate could work more efficiently with 10 or 12 committees, and the house with 15 or 20.

The overlapping jurisdiction of present committees is wasteful and inefficient. As many as three and four committees may be studying different aspects of the same problem simultaneously.

More serious is the lack of legislative co-ordination that may result from divided jurisdiction. For example, on a subject relating to certain rights of veterans, as many as four committees in the senate may have some jurisdiction.

Congress should divest itself of certain secondary functions which take valuable time both in committees and on the floors of both houses. There is no good reason why congress in this day and age should act as the common council of the District of Columbia.

Similarly, congress should transfer to some suitable administrative agency the burdensome task of investigating petty claims against the government which involve the passage of a great number of private bills.

UPWARDS OF 15,000 bills are introduced in each congress. About 1,000 are passed, usually in language considerably amended. The bills cover the complete range of all governmental activity, and it is physically impossible for a member of congress to be fully informed, to offer desirable amendments, to debate the merits or to vote intelligently thereon without a competent staff to assist him.

Thousands of telegrams, letters and postcards from the general public daily assist him in his job. But each communication entails not only the task of carefully evaluating the advice or opinion, but usually also requires a personal reply, if possible, in return.

The question is, What can be done to improve the situation? One of the suggestions that has met with considerable favor is the expansion of the legislative reference service and the office of the legislative counsel.

Both organizations should be expanded to provide greater assistance to the members of congress. However, this will not obviate the need for better staffing of committees, as reorganized, nor the need for additional clerical assistance for individual members.

I FEEL THAT the establishment of a legislative executive council composed of party leaders in congress and the members of the President's cabinet offers many possibilities for improving the present relationships between the congress and the executive branches of the government.

Congress has a right to know all the essential facts about those who appear before congress or otherwise to urge the passage or rejection of pending legislation. Sinister pressure groups and lobbyists are usually spotted quickly by members of congress, and committee cross-examination usually brings out the sponsorship or backing of these groups. Nevertheless, for the protection of the public, it may be desirable to require those who appear before congress to register and make full disclosure of sponsorship and financial backing.

There is one thought, above all, that I want to emphasize. Congress as an institution is your major bulwark against oppression. It is the prime pillar of our democracy and free institutions. Weaken or destroy it and the liberties of the people will go by the board.

GALLUP POLL

The Future Of Television

By GEORGE GALLUP,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J.—Television is one postwar development which the public doesn't think is going to come on with a rush.

In fact, the average man in this country thinks it will be five years before even one-fourth of all homes in the country are equipped with television sets. He thinks it will be about 10 years before half the homes have television sets.

The price which the average man expects to pay for his set is about $150.00. This is for a set which would give satisfactory service, and the price of $150.00 is what the average man says he would consider low enough to interest him in owning a television set.

The present range of television set prices is from $150.00 to about $1,500, according to an industry spokesman.

The range of prices given as fair by the public is shown in response to the following question:

"What would you regard as a fair price for a television set—that is, one that would be good enough to give satisfactory service and low enough in price to interest you in buying?"

THE REPLIES

Under $100	16%
$100	18
$125	5
$150-$195	17
$200	12
$250	6
Over $250, but under $500	7
$500	1
Over $500 (estimates ran to over $5,000)	1
Don't know	17
	100%

Other highlights from the survey:

About one out of every six interviewed said they do not know what television is.

Only about one in every five has even seen a television set in operation.

BOB HOPE

It Says Here

I see that Mayor LaGuardia is slicing right into our racket by signing a radio contract, and I don't think we deserve it from him. After all, I don't wear a hat, have no interest in fires higher than a hot-foot, and never read the funnies above a whisper.

I wired him, "What's the idea? Why don't you retire?" He wired back, "Sorry, don't want the Little Flower to go to pot!"

I'll admit the mayor has promise as a comedian. Colonna and I saw the newsreel where the mayor read the funny papers on the air. He was so funny, it was three weeks before I could get Colonna out of his hole to do our regular broadcasts . . . and I was shoving as hard as I could.

And the mayor's announced that he's going to conduct a strict campaign against gambling If "strict" happens to include a small bingo in the sideyard of a private home, I'll get even by doing more hat jokes than he ever dreamed of.

The mayor probably figures it's pretty nice to have a radio job where you don't depend on the vote of the people to get it. The only trouble is that they can impeach you so fast with that little dial.

So many of the politicians are going into the entertainment field . . . Jimmy Walker to head a record company, Commissioner Valentine into radio, Sen. Chandler to baseball. So far as I know, none of the politicians are going in for radio comedy, though. They can get more laughs where they are.

The last time I talked to LaGuardia I told him what a great gag his hat makes, but he got the wrong idea . . . I kept telling him after I got it out of my throat.

"Ezra Pound, American-born poet charged with traitorous acts, is declared mentally incompetent and, therefore, not subject to prosecution."—News item.

Men like to criticize the flaws that creep into our written laws,
The loopholes through which sundry crooks escape when they are on the books.
For holding up a train or bank and headed for a prison, dank.
It's getting so nobody fears a trial by jury of his peers
For very seldom do we see 12 honest men who will agree—
Some are the sympathetic kind and some possess a stubborn mind
And by the time the verdict's read the lawyers and the judge are dead,
The culprit's old and of no use to have around the calaboose.
Sometimes, not having much defense, someone will plead a lack of sense,
He makes insanity his plea, yet is as sane as sane can be.
It seems to us a bit unfair that poets with their flowing hair
All super-charged with birds and bees and trees and breeze and,
maybe, fleas,
Should be pre-judged as under par and never brought before the bar;
But come and join us, Brother Pound; you will be fun to have around!

DAMON RUNYON

Recommends a Sound Investment

Continuing my discourse on the financial situation, I hear it said a dozen times a day that "everybody has money," but of course those who say it mean it in about the same sense as Miss Louella Parsons might say "everybody was at the Jack Benny's party," Lolly's "everybody" being two-three hundred inmates of the Hollywood movie colony.

The "everybody" said to have money are some thousands of our population of millions. Louella's "everybody" is surely more representative in proportion to population of the Hollywood colony than the "everybody" said to have money is to the 130,000,000 population of the United States.

What I am getting at, and believe me, my friends, it is a relief to untangle myself from the above verbiage (and I promise I will not again become so involved) is that "everybody" does not have money. There have been added to our old established lists of wealthy, a number of persons who made large amounts of money in contracts and other war enterprises, or from operations in the black market, and who are attracting some attention because of their attempts to get rid of their money.

They are frightened by the possession of it, even though it may be strictly legit. They have been scared silly by rumors of a thing called inflation that is supposed to make money worthless and possessions very valuable, though as I have said before, our old experienced zillionaires seem to be willing to trade their possessions in for the do-re-me.

NOT ONLY does everybody not have money but everybody will not have money until there is a redistribution of income in this country so that one man will not be collecting a salary of nearly $1,000,000 a year, and another man $1,500 or less a year. Everybody will not have money as long as the cost of living is out of all proportion to the average individual's wages.

My old man used to go around saying something to this effect fifty years ago, now that I think of it, until one night a miscreant knocked him off his soap box with a ripe tomato. But let no reader become irked with me and start pegging. These things I mention will never come to pass, so there is no reason to get in a sweat about them. Everybody will never have money. Never.

WHAT TO DO with money is a consideration that gives me no uneasiness whatever, as each little nickel and dime and dollar that I get hold of is ticketed for its own individual slot long before it reaches my hands and that has always been the case with me. I am in effect just the distributing agent. The only problem money has ever been to me is getting it in the first instance, though I thank some of my loving friends for the compliment of rumors to the contrary.

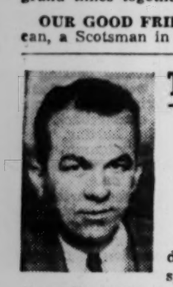
I have never been confused by the question of what to do with money after I got it. I have never been bothered by much bookkeeping because I have found that my income and my spending always seem to balance fairly evenly without any exertion on my part. Therefore, in the present state of money unrest, I can sit back and view the agitation with great calmness, knowing that it has nothing to do with me.

THE BOTTOM can drop out of the stock market with all hands on board for all I care. Real estate can fall dead and it will not faze me. The ground will always be there, will it? Well, so will the mortgage. Those paintings are nice, but how can you pay the storage charges without cash? And who wants Rembrandt when you need ham and eggs?

Yes, I know I sound as if I am in a sadistic mood, but I am tired of hearing about how "everybody has money." It would be more accurate to say everybody is practically broke. Yet I realized the utter desperation of one of the possessors of a gob of the new wealth when he asked me the other day what I would do with it if I were in his place.

HE SAID IT was causing him insomnia thinking about it—that he had not had a night's good sleep in months. I cannot understand how he missed hearing that when it comes to economics, I am a total numbskull. And yet I think I gave him advice as good as he could get from any financial giant around.

I told him to take all his dough and buy United States bonds and use them for a pillow to sleep on. I said, being free from worry, he could not fail to sleep soundly. I said the only chance of losing his money was for Uncle Sam to fail and if that happened, there would be no reason for him to sleep any more, and he would have more company in his insomnia than the world has ever before seen.



THOMAS L. STOKES

President To Talk To the People

WASHINGTON.—It is significant that President Truman has chosen this particular time to speak to the people, right in their own homes, over the radio, in the manner of the "fireside chats" of his predecessor.

Not only is the nation in the midst of big events both at home and abroad—almost to the point of turbulence—which need some straightforward, plain talking of which the President has proved himself capable.

But Mr. Truman has just come from a rough-housing with congress in which he emerged second best. Most of his important domestic proposals are either in pigeonholes or badly mangled, even though congress has dealt handsomely with him thus far on foreign policy matters in which it shares jurisdiction with the President.

IT IS ASSUMED that Mr. Truman will have something to say about his differences with congress on home front affairs. The time, just in advance of the new session, is appropriate. His talk directly with the people, it appears, has much the same purpose in this field as had similar talks by President Roosevelt. This is to take them into his confidence about his objectives with congress, explain simply what he has in mind, and try to rally support in what is coming to be a major contest with congress.

How important Mr. Truman regards this address to the people may be judged from the isolation he has sought to prepare it—in a boat trip on Chesapeake Bay, accompanied by a few close advisers, including Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, who occupied a draftsman's role for President Roosevelt for so long. The President will return to his desk a day ahead of his talk Thursday night.

MR. TRUMAN is face-to-face with a responsibility both toward the people and to his party.

He publicly recognized his responsibility to the people, in addition to that to congress, in plain words in his veto message on the war funds rescission bill. There he challenged as contrary to the public interest congress' action in authorizing, by a rider on that measure, the return of the employment services to the states in the immediate future.

HE EXHIBITED there a new role which he is expected to emphasize in his address next week. His responsibility to the public at large also is at stake in the current industrial strife. Just before he left Washington General Motors refused to yield to his suggestion that it open its books to the fact-finding board in that case.

It is obvious that Mr. Truman is equally conscious of his responsibility, at this time, to give direction and course to his party, which is floundering. The grumblings from the progressives and from the left is rising to a big noise over the southern conservative wing of the party which persists, just as in the closing years of the Roosevelt era, in blocking Mr. Truman's domestic measures in congress.

It is a divided house politically over which he rules.

He has tried to steer a middle course. But that is getting harder by the day. He has tried to placate the southerners because of their power in congress. The price of their alienation is trouble for himself with congress. But the price of giving in to them may be the loss of the 1948 election.

DEMOCRATS can win only as a progressive party with a progressive program. That is axiomatic. If the party becomes conservative at this time, too, it faces the prospect of a third party movement which, though it probably would get nowhere, surely would mean defeat for the Democrats by splitting the progressive vote.

Mr. Truman truly faces some important decisions in the reaches of Chesapeake bay.

Cravath To Visit Atlanta PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 30.—Win, lose or draw, Coach Jeff Cravath, of Southern California, will attend the Atlanta Touchdown Club's annual two-day party on Jan. 25-26 in Atlanta. Cravath, who would have joined the list of visiting coaches a year ago at the invitation of Jack Robertson except for a previous commitment, said at an Alabama function last night that he had looked forward to another invitation.

"It will be a great pleasure for me to get together with Frank Thomas, Wally Butts, Bobby Dodd, Bill Alexander and the other fine southern athletic figures in Atlanta. Mrs. Cravath has been anxious to see Peachtree street and some of the places described so picturesquely by Margaret Mitchell in her great book, 'Gone With the Wind'. Tell me this—do they really have peach trees on Peachtree street?"

We assured Mr. Cravath that he would see peach trees in bloom in front of a famous Atlanta department store if he would continue his visit until spring.

"I'm going to spend plenty of time in the south. Zipp Newman and Frank Thomas will take me on a hunting trip after the Atlanta Touchdown Club party. I'm going to take dead aim on some of those Alabama quail," Cravath asserted.

It is difficult to get the Trojan coach to talk about the Rose Bowl football game, but when anyone mentions his forthcoming trip to Dixie he waxes enthusiastic.

"We have a proud record in the Rose Bowl," said Cravath, "and we'd like to make it nine straight, if possible."

Trojans Experienced Southern California has five players with previous Rose Bowl experience, but only two, Blake Headley and Bob Morris, are backs.

The others with bowl experience are Jack Musick, left tackle, and John Pehar, right tackle, starters against Tennessee, and John McGinn, reserve right guard.

Reserve Tackle Myron Doornbos weighs 230, but the real giant of the squad is a sub, Tackle Jay Perrin. He weighs 320 pounds.

The Trojan line is huge. The backs also are big and they are fast. The rush line is not fast, and the pass defense is very spotty, indeed. It is calculated that Hurling Harry Gilmer will run the Trojans ragged with his running and passing.

Gilmer is, of course, Alabama's second-best ground gainer, in addition to being one of the best passers this country has ever seen. On 79 running plays during the season Gilmer gained 552 yards for an average of 6.9 per carry.

Alabama's broken-jawed fullback, Lowell Tew, had an 8.1 average in 88 carries. He gained 715 yards. Norwood Hodges, accomplished quarterback, ran the ball 77 times and gained 307 yards. They are the big three of Alabama's offensive.

The Los Angeles Times' Al Wolf came out in favor of Alabama in his Sunday column. He picked the Crimson Tide by a score of 20 to 13.

Wolf explained, "This has to be a good Tide football team, no matter what the opposition was or was not.

"Grantland Rice calls Gilmer the greatest passer ever. The kid must have it. S. C. has to be rated a very ordinary ball club.

"But the traditional New Year's Day uplift should keep the Trojans right in there. S. C.'s line will be the toughest article Alabama has met—and if those big Troy forwards play the game they did against U. C. L. A. at season's end, 'Bama might not own the ball very much. But S. C.'s power, featuring Tannehill, on the breakaway wide sweep and the screen pass, could so quickly be trumped by a few passes. And if you lay back to thwart Gilmer, why he simply runs with the ball, as Georgia's Charlie Trippi did against U. C. L. A. on Jan. 1, 1943."

We Agree We agree with everything Al Wolf has to say. There is no use to delay a selection any longer. We've seen both squads in practice and unhesitantly we take Alabama by two touchdowns. In a betting proposition we can't go for the 13 points by which Alabama is favored, but it well could be that Alabama will win by two touchdowns or more.

Alabama has been thoroughly prepared for the game. The boys are very familiar with Trojan plays. They have spent much time on preparing a defense against the tricky Trojan plays.

S. C. uses the T formation, and the screen pass is a carbon copy of the one Georgia uses.

We doubt it will work against Alabama. We also doubt that the long passes will click. And yet the Trojans have the weight, the backfield speed and enough reserves to get across the goal line.

The game, as a spectacle, should be outstanding. Enough people want to see it to fill two bowls the size of Rose Bowl.

We Disagree We can't agree with Wolf's selection of Tulsa over Georgia. Wolf's prediction is Tulsa 13, Georgia 12. For sure, Georgia will add the extra points if they get the touchdowns. George Jernigan will take care of that.

We realize Tulsa is tough. The performance of the Golden Hurricane against Indiana and Oklahoma A. and M. is proof enough.

But we still like Georgia by a touchdown. Charlie Trippi will not be stopped. And it so happens that John Donaldson has come into his own. The Bulldogs are tough competition.

Coach Frank Thomas says Wally Butts and the Bulldogs have a real battle on their hands, but Tommy strings along with Georgia.

Sports Arena Defeats ASF

The Sports Arena cagers defeated the A. S. F. Officers, 76 to 71, yesterday afternon at the Arena court in a contest which required an extra five-minute overtime period.

Coach Moon's Arena boys held a 36-31 halftime advantage. At the termination of regular playing time the score was knotted at 67-all. Ralph Hamilton, A. S. F. Officer forward and one of the best shots ever to play in the south, was high point man of the contest with 34. Paul Crain topped the winners, caging 14.

Hollie Lough's Lorelei Ladies handed the Tomboys their first defeat of the season in a regular scheduled game on the same program, 30 to 20.

John McCarley's Sports Arena Blues defeated a combination of Tomboys and Loreleis by 34 to 7 to round out the card.

Long Punts By Hodges Boost Tide

By JACK TROY
Constitution Sports Editor

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 30.—Alabama apparently has overcome the one weakness that has been worrying Frank Thomas as he prepared the Crimson players for their titanic Rose Bowl engagement with the massive Southern California Trojans on New Year's Day. Norwood Hodges has been putting a flashing toe into the football and has impressed all observers with his booming punts.

All season long poor punting has handicapped the Tidesmen, although they went through a good schedule without a loss.

Now it appears that punting will be one of the stronger points in the Tide offensive against Jeff Cravath's Trojans. Thomas is highly pleased with the development of Hodges, who is a smart quarterback.

POPULAR SUPPOSITION

It has been a popular supposition on the west coast that Southern California is deeper in reserve strength than Alabama. This is not true. Neither team is two deep in all positions. Each coach will have to substitute individually.

Southern Cal uses the T formation, while Alabama still operates from the orthodox Notre Dame system, operating from a box.

Lowell Tew, Alabama's leading ground gainer and hardest runner, is in good shape for the game. He is all set to play most of the game, wearing an iron mask to protect his broken jaw. Tew has lost only about eight pounds in weight. This doesn't bother him as he is a very powerful boy.

Alabama didn't work on Sunday, but will be on Rose Bowl field tomorrow for the final workout. The Tidesmen are in top shape, ready to match the Trojans on a physical basis. They will be outweighed but Alabama is big enough.

Alabama spent one whole day blocking for the kicker and protecting on Harry Gilmer's passes.

Southern Cal has had more than one weakness during the season. One has been an inability to hold the ball. The Trojans have fumbled close to half a hundred times in the regular schedule.

MORE FUMBLING

There may be some more fumbling in the Rose Bowl, for the Alabama linesmen charge hard and the players tackle for keeps.

St. Mary's was a smaller team than Alabama, actually, and caused the Trojans to fumble copiously as the Trojans went down before Wedemeyer and company, 26 to 0.

In the last half of the final U. C. L. A. game which S. C. won, 26 to 16, the UCLANS outscored the Trojans in the last half. They won on short and long passes.

Alabama supporters feel the Tidesmen will romp over S. C. and end their eight-game winning streak in the Rose Bowl. Kickoff time is 2 p. m., coast time, or 5 p. m., Atlanta time.

Tag Team Bout Arouses Interest

Keen interest is being shown by wrestling fans in the tag team match in which Al Massey and Laverne Baxter will face Jack LaRue and Vic Emanuel next Friday night at the City Auditorium.

Promoter Paul Jones has booked the clean-cut Baxter and Massey on the same team against the tough LaRue and Emanuel, so the fur is expected to fly.

LaRue and Baxter put on a hammer-and-tongs battle last week, the bout ending in a draw. Massey gave World Champion Bill Longson all he could handle before finally being pinned.

The semi-final battle will see Tarzan White, ex-Alabama All-American grid star, opposing Dick Lever in a one-fall match.

In a 20-minute preliminary Rudy Strongberg, who beat Ben Bennicasa last week, meets Wally Greb, and another preliminary will be announced later.

Illinois Upset Of De Paul Cage Feature

By TED MEIER

NEW YORK, Dec. 30—(AP)—Illinois, beaten previously by Wright Field, Ohio State and Iowa, pulled the college basketball upset of the season last night by trouncing the previously undefeated DePaul Demons of Chicago, 56-37.

Comparable to last season's totally unexpected victory of Penn over Army, the triumph shattered DePaul's eight-game win streak that included conquests of the Oklahoma Aggies, Bowling Green, University of Washington, Indiana State, Arkansas State and Oregon State.

Perhaps the most outstanding feat of the week was accomplished by the Oklahoma Aggies, mythical champions. They won the championship of the Oklahoma Ctiy tourney for the second straight year, beating Texas, Kansas and Baylor on successive nights to run their record for the year to 7-1 and six in a row since losing to DePaul, 46-42.

Kentucky and Wyoming remained unbeaten by trouncing St. John's 73-59 and Valparaiso, 48-40. Bowling Green extended its record to 11-1 by taking Long Island, 51-49. Ohio State, licked only by Wright Field in its first game, took over the lead in the Big Ten by whipping Michigan, 57-40, for its fifth straight.

North Carolina, Southern Conference champs, knocked both New York University and St. Joseph's of Philadelphia out of the unbeaten ranks. NYU fell, 43-41, at Madison Square Garden on Thursday and St. Joseph's went down, 47-36 at Convention Hall in Philadelphia last night. Tennessee, beaten for the first time by Long Island on Christmas, bounced back by trimming Temple, 43-36.

All-Stars Entrain Today For Peach Bowl Tilt

By JACK ROBERTS.

Atlanta All-Stars will entrain this afternoon at 5 o'clock for Macon to tangle with the South Georgia All-Stars in the Peach Bowl tomorrow afternoon. The Doyalmen will have reached their peak of football performance when they board the train and will be set to destroy the power boogey about Billy Henderson and company.

The Atlanta men tapered off yesterday afternoon with only light drills after having gone through their final rough work Saturday afternoon on the Polo grounds at Piedmont Park. The Doyalmen fought like a real team for the first time Saturday with several of the stars scuffing their faces and arms in the rough tackling and blocking. The only serious accident of the day occurred to Sammy Scarborough, former Decatur back, now a Marine, who dislocated his shoulder. Scarborough was one of the rugged men who volunteered to work out against the All-Stars.

Coach Doyal said yesterday that his men were ready to go down to Macon and show the South Georgians what these city-bred men could do.

In Macon yesterday Coach Tom Porter, of the South Georgia All-Stars said that his boys were taking this affair as another war between the States. They plan to consider any man that lives north of the Bibb county line to be a Yankee and would be treated as such in the Peach Bowl.

Porter has moulded the heavyweights of the highly rivalrous South Georgia prep schools into a smooth working bundle of dyanmite.

Little Jack Capps, 155 pound guard, viewed the size of his gargantuan team mates and said that his mother would have called him back had she known that he was playing with the Goliath boys.

Coach Porter's latest addition to his team is John Childress, 180 pound end from Richmond Academy, to replace Duckworth who broke his nose in Friday's session.

SEC Quintets To See Action

Devoid of action during the holidays, with exception of eastern games involving Kentucky and Tennessee, the Southeastern Conference basketball race goes through a final round of practice games this weekend before getting down to serious business.

Thus far, only two conference games have been played and in both Auburn defeated Mississippi State. That also marked the only action those teams have had. Before going east, Tennessee was undefeated in four games and Kentucky had won six without a loss, including games from Arkansas, Oklahoma and Cincinnati.

Tulane is unbeaten in five games with service teams; Louisiana State has a perfect record of four games, including a 51-50 win over Texas A. & M., Florida and Georgia Tech have each won their only start, and Georgia won two without losing prior to Christmas.

The other three teams, Vanderbilt, Alabama and Mississippi, have yet to see action.

Conference games this week are limited to Auburn at Georgia Tech on Friday night, and Auburn at Georgia Saturday night.

Koslowski Listed As Probable Starter

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 30.—(AP)—Holy Cross Coach John (Ox) Dagrosa today listed triple-threat Tailback Stan Koslowski as a "probable starter" against the University of Miami in the Orange Bowl New Year's Day.

"He's in pretty good shape," Dagrosa commented after watching the rangy Crusader star in action on the Biltmore hospital golf course.

The coach indicated that unless prevented by a recurrence of the flu attack that bedded Koslowski here for several days, the triple-threater will take his place in the starting lineup.

ATLANTANS SEEK PRO FRANCHISE

An application for a franchise in the Dixie Professional Football League has been received from interested Atlantans, it was stated at Richmond, Va., where directors of the league concluded a two-day meeting.

The Atlanta application, as well as others from Knoxville, Greensboro, N. C., and Asheville, N. C., will be considered if the league decides to expand.

Gaels, Aggies Set for Gong In Sugar Bowl

By "SON" MAXWELL.
Constitution Staff Writer

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30.—A capacity house, 72,000 persons, today awaited the Sugar Bowl battle here Tuesday between the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's and the Oklahoma Aggies.

The bottle day after tomorrow will be the 12th annual game here in the mammoth stadium and looms as one of the classiest battles of the entire series. The Aggies are undefeated, one of the few unbeaten teams in any Bowl this year, while the Gaels were only deprived of an unbeaten record in the last minute of their final game.

The Gaels romped through seven straight wins and were leading UCLA, 7-6, in the last 50 seconds when the UCLAns scored the winning touchdown.

WON HANDILY

The Aggies, on the other hand, beat most of their opposition handily and had only two close calls while racking up eight wins. The Arkansas victory, 19-14, and the 12-6 win over Tulsa were the close calls for the Aggies.

The opposing clubs will come into New Orleans tomorrow, a day before the game, from their camps over in Mississippi at Edgewater Park and Gulfport. They put the finishing touches on their pre-game drills this afternoon and both coaches, Jimmy Phelan, of St. Mary's, and Jim Lookabaugh, of the Aggies, pronounced their charges in top shape.

The game shapes up as a ground gaining duel between Bob Fenimore, of the Aggies, and Herman Wedemeyer, the Hawaiian. Both are All-Americans and their individual battle for gaining honors should make this year's Sugar Bowl classic one of the greatest in the history of this number 2 bowl game of the nation.

However, it may be that two other players, overshadowed by their more illustrious teammates, will steal the show. The two are "Spike" Cordeiro, of the Gaels, and Jim Reynolds, understudy for Fenimore.

ANOTHER HAWAIIAN

Cordeiro is a Hawaiian like Wedemeyer, while Reynolds is an Indian. A battle of races, so to speak. Cordeiro weighs only 155 pounds, but is fast. While the Aggies concentrate on Wedemeyer, Cordeiro may surprise them.

Reynolds was a tailback before he went to war, and when he returned Fenimore had taken over the job and Reynolds was shifted to fullback. Thus the Aggies have the choice of using these two triple-threat men in the same backfield. However, it looks now as if Reynolds will be used in Fenimore's place and vice versa.

In any event, it should be a free-scoring battle if there is no rain with the Aggies generally favored by one touchdown, although the gambling gentry is giving 13 points.

East Lake Dogfight Draws 12 Foursomes

Pete Barnes, Tommy Barnes, Dr. A. O. Linch and Ernest Harrison, with a score of plus six, formed the winning foursome yesterday in the weekly East Lake dogfight in which 12 foursomes competed.

R. D. Ison, Dave Ison, Carl Muller and P. G. Lombard, with plus three, and John Stiga, H. S. Roberts, R. J. King and Robert Ingram, with plus two, were next in order. Jack Robertson, H. D. Kline, W. L. Renda and J. R. Morris followed with an even score.

Bulldogs, Tulsa Rated Even Now

By F. M. WILLIAMS
Constitution Staff Writer.

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 30.—Georgia's Bulldogs, after three weeks in a favorite's role, suddenly found themselves today no better than an even bet to beat the mighty Tulsa Hurricane in the Oil Bowl game here Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Atlanta time.

Most Houston sports writers are picking the Hurricane to win the battle because of a great advantage in weight and experience, and evidently the boys who risk their cash on football games have been impressed.

At any rate, it's even money and take your choice now, instead of Georgia being a six point favorite.

Both clubs are simply marking time until the kickoff. They went through light drills today and both coaches, Wallace Butts, of Georgia, and Henry Frnka, of Tulsa, planned only brief warmups Monday.

GOOD WEATHER

Georgia followers are praying for continuation of the perfect weather that has been enjoyed since the Bulldogs hit town Friday. So far there hasn't been a cloud in the sky and it is comfortable to walk around in shirt sleeves.

Butts, who realizes his only chance to win is through the air, has the assurance of at least 5,000 Houstonians that it will be a dry day Tuesday. The Georgia mentor's standard greeting from here on is "What's the weather going to be like?"

If it is a dry day, the game could well develop into a two-man duel, with Charlie Trippi's passing featuring Georgia's offense and Camp Wilson, 220-pound fullback, offering Tulsa's biggest threat with his powerful drives.

Georgia has stressed passing in every drill this week and Saturday afternoon Trippi and Johnny Rauch, freshman quarterback who does some of the hurling, completed 44 out of 45 attempts. That isn't bad even when there isn't any knocking going on.

The Rice hotel, headquarters for Georgia, looked like a combination of Peachtree street in Atlanta and Costa's restaurant in Athens as Bulldog supporters began flowing into town today.

ATHENIANS HIT TOWN

A whole busload of Athenians hit town late last night, and today Atlantans who elected to drive out began to check in.

Oil Bowl officials disclosed that both Georgia and Tulsa disposed of most of the tickets they asked for, and as one expressed it, "there isn't any place for them to sleep, but we're glad they are here."

The game will be a sellout by kickoff time. Only seats in temporary stands, hastily constructed last week, are available.

On a clear day, Oil Bowl headquarters said, there will be customers turned away.

MURDER WAVE OVER BERLIN SENDS U. S., RUSSIAN POLICE SCOURING SECTOR

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—(AP)—The bodies of four murder victims were found in Berlin Sunday and American and Russian military police scoured the American sector of the city for gunmen who may have been responsible also for the slaying of two U. S. soldiers last week.

The latest victims included a Russian in the uniform of a Red army captain, found in the Anhalter station area, shot between the eyes, and another Russian whose nude body was found with the face almost blown off.

Other victims were a German civilian who was shot and killed while walking along the street and another wounded nearby. Description of the assailants fitted the pair sought in the slaying of two American sergeants in the Tempelhof airdrome district last week, police said.

In addition, one other German was killed on the doorstep of a friend's home, and another was near death after he was shot in the stomach.

Offer 1,500,000 Bales of Cotton

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(UP) About 650,000 bales of cotton will be offered for sale on a bid basis within 10 days in an effort to help mills meet civilian requirements for cotton goods, the Agriculture Department announced Sunday night.

An additional 850,000 bales will be placed in Commodity Credit Corporation catalog stocks within the next 90 days and will be offered for sale immediately afterwards. The total will include about 850,000 bales of 1943 pooled cotton and the remainder will be reconcentration and purchase program stocks.

Additions to catalog stocks formerly have been offered for sale at the stabilization price announced each month by the department. Any of the cotton offered on the bid basis, which does not sell at or above the stabilization price on the first offering, will then be offered at the stabilization price.

U. S. Nourishes Vienna Zone

VIENNA, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Headquarters of Gen. Mark W. Clark, in a report reviewing the occupation of Austria, said Sunday that food and other goods had been brought into Vienna by U. S. forces to alleviate suffering in the U. S. zone.

During the first month and a half of U. S. occupation, food staples were imported at the rate of 500 tons a day, the report said. Since that time, fuel, clothing and medical supplies have been brought in, as well as food.

Supplementary rations have been provided for school children, sick persons and nursing and expectant mothers. Hundreds of children have been given physical examinations and 10,000 children have been moved into rural homes by Vienna welfare agencies, at the suggestion of American authorities, it added.

Army's Discharge Points Pared to 50

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Six hundred thousands more Army men and women become eligible Sunday for discharge. The point score will be cut from 55 to 50 for enlisted men and from 73 to 70 for officers.

The length of service required after Tuesday for separation of enlisted men will be reduced from 48 to 42 months and from 51 to 48 months for male officers, except Medical Department officers.

The critical score for WAC personnel will not be reduced but length of service will be computed for the first time. Enlisted WACS become eligible for discharge after two years and a half of honorable service, and WAC officers after three years and three months.

The changes, together with other new discharge rules, were announced Dec. 19.

SAVES TIME AND RED FACES

No longer will there be whispered and hesitant replies to the "how much do you weigh" question across airport ticket counters of Delta Air Lines.

Delta has announced it had established an average weight estimate of 165 pounds for every passenger, which will be used after Jan. 1, instead of asking each individual for his actual weight. Baggage will continue to be weighed.

Purpose of the change is not to save embarrassment of some stout souls, but to save time.

HERE IS THE ISSUE

Is American Business To Be Based on Free Competition, or Is It to Become Socialized, With All Activities Controlled and Regimented?

General Motors has faced what it believes is a highly critical issue. It has made its decision. It is important that the public understand the issue. The issue at stake transcends the interests of General Motors. There is involved something far more consequential—a most vital principle.

> Is American business in the future, as in the past, to be conducted as a competitive system? Or is the determination of the essential economic factors, such as costs, prices, profits, etc., upon which business success and progress depend, to be made politically by some governmental agency instead of by the management appointed by the owners of the business for that purpose?

America is at the crossroads! It must preserve the freedom of each unit of American business to determine its own destinies. Or it must transfer to some governmental bureaucracy, or agency, or to a union, the responsibility of management that has been the very keystone of American business. Shall this responsibility be surrendered? That is the decision the American people face. America must choose!

> General Motors has made its choice. It refuses to subscribe to what it believes will ultimately become, through the process of evolution, the death of the American system of competitive enterprise. It will not participate voluntarily in what stands out crystal-clear at the end of the road—a regimented economy. If this is what the American people want, they must make that choice through their accredited representatives in congress. General Motors declines for itself to take such a great responsibility.

It may be said that this is an exaggeration. It is not! All business questions are interrelated. Costs, prices, wages, profits, schedules, investments must be the responsibility of management. Political determination of such relationships means regimentation.

The idea of ability to pay, whatever its validity may be, is not applicable to an individual business within an industry as a basis for raising its wages beyond the going rate.

Consider the implications of such a principle. Who would risk money to develop or expand a business under such circumstances? Where would be the incentive to do a more efficient job? Would it be intelligent to destroy the incentive for efficiency? Would it not be more intelligent to subscribe to the principle that no one should be forced to pay more than the going rate? Should General Motors, assuming it is more efficient, be required to pay more for materials, for transportation, for services or for wages than its competition? And how much more determined by a political governmental agency?

> Do you subscribe to the belief that you should pay for what you buy or the services you use on the basis of your financial resources? It is clear that this is the principle involved.

The President of the United States has appointed a fact-finding board to inquire into the circumstances involved in the demands of the UAW-CIO upon General Motors and to make recommendations related thereto. General Motors stood ready to supply the board with all necessary data regarding wage rates, employees' earnings, hours of employment, and all other relevant information regarding wages and employment. However, the board has ruled that General Motors' ability to pay will be considered as a factor in determining an increase in wages. This would require an appraisal of costs, prices, prospective volume of business, investment factors, expenses and the entire forward operating program of the business. Thus the board would assume the most vital functions of management.

> General Motors is not contending that it has or has not the ability to pay. It always has paid liberal wages. It has attempted through protracted collective bargaining sessions to determine what is fair and equitable today. It has made a fair and liberal offer to the union.

Notwithstanding the importance of re-establishing employment and resuming production at the earliest possible moment, the above reasons have made it impossible for General Motors to participate in the proceedings of the board under the procedures as now established, and it has therefore withdrawn from the hearings. It takes that position with great regret. But it does so in the sincere belief that this action is in the long-term interest of employees, consumers, investors, and of the public as well—and of higher standards for all.

"More and Better Things For More People"

In Retrospect

We see the Year just drawing to a close . . .

A year begun in struggle for our very lives . . .

A year of loss of leaders, of the birth of new ones . . .

A year of almost-desperation—then of hope—

And of that final glorious Victory, long-sought and won at last.

Today the World's at Peace.

We thank the Lord becaues He gave it,

And pray to Him that this Peace shall not end

For selfishness or greed

Or other human foible . . .

But that the Morrow shall mark the beginning

Of an age when men shall live together

In the true Brotherhood of mankind.

The WORRY CLINIC

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Love is the true spiritual bond that ties parents and children together, so adopt a couple of youngsters if you can't have any of your own. Think of the love-starved little boys and girls praying each night that God will send them a Daddy and Mother "all my own."

CASE H-287: Norman L., aged 7, has a stepmother.

"He was two years of age when I married his father," the stepmother informed me. And three years later my husband was killed in an automobile accident, leaving me no insurance.

"So I got a job and have tried to keep a home for us ever since. Norman loves me, and I look upon him as my own son.

"Some time ago you wrote about the true parent-child relationship as being a spiritual thing, like love between husband and wife. You said a couple could adopt a child and love him as their own son.

"Well, I know that is true from my own experience with Norman. We belong together and I would do anything in the world for him.

"I cannot even imagine that he is not my very own. When people sometimes comment, 'It was sure nice of you to keep him,' I almost boil, for why shouldn't I keep my very own?"

There are thousands of families where sterility will prevent children of the flesh-and-blood variety. In these cases the wives in particular are often very desirous of adopting youngsters. Sometimes the husbands initiate the suggestion, but in most cases the wife launches the idea and only "sells" her husband on it after much discussion. Even then the usual choice for the adopted child is a girl, not a boy, for the male is jealous.

But the true parent-child relationship is a spiritual bond.

When you choose a wife, you don't think about picking a girl who is your sister or cousin. In fact, you avoid consanguinity. Yet you should feel more closely knit to your wife than your own flesh-and-blood kinfolk.

If you love a child at an orphanage, he becomes your child in a trurer sense than if he was born of your body. For love is the true basis of parenthood. And the child whom you choose will stick by you through thick and thin if you rear him properly.

Moreover, your flesh-and-blood child may humiliate you, turn against you and bring your gray head in sorrow to the grave, if you do not train him properly. There is no magic in blood, therefore, for it is plain bunk to state that "blood is thicker than water."

Shy, love-starved little urchins are praying at night that they will get a daddy or a mother. And at the age of 10 or 12, these same orphans are pathetically eager to have "parents all my own," as they phrase it. They will boast about you as their daddy and mother. And you will feel your own personality blossom and become sweeter, so adopt children if you haven't any of your own.

Teach them to be God-fearing citizens. Rear them wisely. They will be your sons and daughters, carrying on your ideals and traditions, your hopes and even your business ventures.

In your later years, moreover, they will bear you grandchildren and thus give you newt zest for living. At Christmas and at Easter, and on dozens of other occasions, they will do something to your heart that you can't imagine till you've experienced it.

Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long 3 cent stamped envelope and a dime to cover typing or printing costs when you send for one of his psychological charts.

Jewel coifs these are called because the hair arrangement and the jewelry is co-ordinated for maximum becomingness and to show to best advantage the jewelry worn. The American Hair Design Institute stylists believe that jewelry should be an integral part of the coiffure, not ever should it be thrust into the hair because one wants to wear an ornament. Barrettes, necklaces, clips, combs and even bracelets may be used to good advantage but they should fit the hair arrangement and should always serve the fundamental purpose of holding the hair in place. These beautiful hair-dos with jewelry were designed for formal occasions.—Winifred Ware, Fashion Editor.

Esther Williams Has Best Figure, Says Columnist

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Let's wind up the old year with a fond, backward glance at the movie stars who rose and scintillated. This is the season when everybody gets up a list of one kind or another, so here goes:

Best All-Around Figure—Esther Williams. And she's healthy, normal weight.

Most Fun—Shirley Temple. As I left she was nibbling a green leaf from the flower bowl to prove she eats greens!

Most Charming—Irene Dunne. I was there when a hard-boiled newspaperman was so overcome with Dunne charm he backed smack into a closet as he left!

Loveliest Legs—Ginger Rogers. For good and obvious reasons.

Healthiest Girl—Jinx Falkenburg. No crazy diets for her. And she loves exercise, all kinds.

Prettiest Girl—Paulette Goddard. (I've never met Hedy).

Most Enterprising—Anita (The Face) Colby. Beauty and brains.

Most Entertaining—Marie (The Body) McDonald. She supplies her own quips.

Most Natural—Una Merkel. She's just exactly the way she is in pictures, and nice to know.

Loveliest Complexion — Anita (Peach Blossom) Louise.

Friendliest—Ann Sheridan. A honey-blond Texan who calls you "Honey."

Best Dressed—Constance Bennett. Favors smart tailored suits. In my opinion, some of the movie queens overdress.

Most Poised—Bette Davis. It's self-confidence and Yankee spunk.

Least Co-operative—Betty Grable. I'm not talking either!

Star I admire most as a person—Joan Crawford. She came up the hard way herself and is always trying to give someone else a break.

I think these are good pickings. You may not. Maybe I haven't interviewed your favorites.

ELIZABETH WOODWARD SAYS:

Sure You Want Date, But Not Every Night!

"Give me time to breathe," Gail muttered. "Don't rush me off my feet." She was talking about the sudden surge of popularity that had come her way. She was being besieged with phone calls and invitations. Her calendar was filled for weeks. She was the rage of the minute . . . and already she'd had enough. You're saying "sour grapes"? You're not believing that Gail wanted her popularity in smaller doses?

IT CAN'T LAST

Most girls would give their eye teeth to be the belle of the ball . . . the boys falling like tenpins . . . the girls swooning with envy. But the public is fickle. Your turn runs out. You ride the crest . . . but the waves break, leaving you on the shore slightly stranded. That's what the big rush means. And you think Gail was afraid of that?

Elizabeth Woodward.

No, she had much more practical stuff on her mind. Her first worry was, "You haven't time for anything . . . if you're all the time on the go." If you have a date every night . . . there's no time to do anything else. All those dates keep you so busy. And there are other things to do in life!

When's a girl supposed to take care of her clothes? How can she be ready to go places and do things, unless she takes time out to catch a stitch, or press a pleat, or sew a snag? If you're going all the time, there isn't time to get ready to go.

If you see a different boy every night in the week, how can you get to know any of them well? You're so busy putting your act over . . . that you don't bother to get acquainted with the guy you're impressing. And there are so many other boys, you get your signals mixed.

Besides, there are music lessons, new books to read, going places with the family, just staying home, visiting grandmother, working on that hooked rug for your room . . . a million things you want to do and can't . . . if you're all flustered up with dates. You just can't get anything done!

Like storing up ammunition for dates. It's like studying for an exam. I know one girl who spent hours before her dates with a special guy boning up on psychology 'cause that's what he wanted to talk about. You needn't cram—but unless you add something new occasionally to your repertoire, you're going to squeeze the old sponge dry. Everybody's going to know exactly what you'll think and say. You'll be an old story.

And that's the way Gail wailed. She loved lots of boys who were giving her tumbles. But she wished they'd slow up a bit. She wished they wouldn't swamp her. So if your own popularity is paced a bit slower . . . at least your head is above water!

Members of Debutante Club 'Pinch Hit' as Columnists

Editor's Note: This contribution to the series from the pens of the season's Debutante Club members was lost in the mail and has just come to light. It is written by Miss Mathilde Turner, popular daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Turner.

MRS. ARTHUR B. KIRKMAN JR.

Mrs. Kirkman is the former Miss Uldine Dukes, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Dukes, of Decatur. Her marriage to Mr. Kirkman, USNR, also of Decatur, took place at the bride's home on Mead road, with Rev. Leon Smith officiating. The ceremony was followed by an informal reception.

Having put off writing this tale of my life just as long as possible—I find I am obliged to get to it right now.

Writing is not my hobby, so I'll just tell you a few things about me. I've lived in Atlanta all my life and love having it as my home. It has been great fun growing up with all the boys and girls—going to Spring Street school and then to Washington Seminary. Those were the good old days and such good times at sorority and fraternity dances; club work and dates, meetings and books all mixed in together.

Well graduation came and college time arrived, and I found myself in the Art School in Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans. To be in New Orleans was wonderful, but nothing new, as it was mother's home and Newcomb was her college.

One of the best things about my freshman year was that August, my brother, was a med student at Tulane, and my! how it helped to have him there. By the next year he had his M. D. degree and a commission as a lieutenant in the Navy, and was then sent to the destroyer Ringgold. Now, oh yes, he is in Tokyo.

I have learned to take care of myself by now, and tho' we have lots of work to do—we have a grand time at Newcomb. My particular hobby is taking pictures, and I am majoring in medical photography.

It has been a great pleasure this year to be a member of the Debutante Club, a group of wonderful girls—most of whom I have known through the years. Combining college with being a debutante is having a good try-out this year, as so many in the club have stuck with their studies in spite of the parties and fun.

Now if you will excuse me—I'll run—to a party.

School Lunchroom

The New Year's open house at the Atlanta Woman's Club will be held on Jan. 1 at 3 o'clock after an old-fashioned custom of many years. The hostesses include the past presidents, officers and chairmen of the federated work. Mrs. John F. MacDougald, president, invites members, their husbands and friends to come.

Decorations will be in charge of Mrs. Clarke Donaldson and Mrs. E. E. Bengtson. Mrs. Charles H. Shelton, chairman of music, will present Mrs. Sue S. Johnson in piano selections. Serving coffee and tea will be Mrs. Max E. Land, Mrs. R. A. Long, Mrs. Marvin W. Medlock and Mrs. William S. Taylor.

Miss Mary Walden Weds Rev. Mauldin

Miss Mary Walden became the bride of Rev. William J. Mauldin, of Greenville, S. C., recently at North Side Park Baptist church, with the Rev. Edwin McGee officiating. Music was presented by Miss Mable James and Mrs. Gertrude Burdette.

Charles Evans and Bill Fields were ushers, and Rev. Horace McLeod was best man. David McIntosh was ringbearer.

Miss Dorothy Mahnks, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore light blue marquisette and carried a shower bouquet of chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was Miss Winona Titshaw. Her gown was like that of the maid of honor. Her flowers also were chrysanthemums.

The bride wore a gown of duchesse satin, and a finger-tip veil caught to a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses centered with orchids.

Following the ceremony Mrs. W. M. West entertained at a reception at her home. The couple left for a trip to Florida.

Miss Martin Wed To Francis Spath

Miss Carita Lou Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hershall Martin, of Cincinnati and Atlanta, became the bride recently of Francis M. Spath, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Spath, of Philadelphia and Atlanta at the Sacred Heart Rectory.

James R. George served as best man. Mrs. James R. George, sister of the bride, was chosen to be matron of honor. Her costume was of aqua and black and her shoulder spray was of white gardenias.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose for her costume, a rose beige suit with brown accessories. She carried a prayer book showered with orchids.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Spath left for Sea Island.

Mrs. Spath graduated from Fairview High school in Dayton, Ohio and is now connected with the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta.

Mr. Spath served in the U. S. Army five years, serving overseas 39 months in the European theater of operations. He is now affiliated with Delta Air Lines.

Mrs. A. W. Hartley announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Peggy Wooten, to Malcolm DeForrest Harper, son of Mrs. Mary O. Harper, of East Point, which took place at the home of the bride. Rev. John L. Waldrop, of West End, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Sgt. H. M. O'Kelley, wore a blue gabardine dressmaker suit and a spray of orchids and tuberoses. Mrs. O'Kelley was maid of honor. Samuel M. Henson served as the groom's best man.

The groom attended Russell High school. He served in the U. S. Army Air Corps 31 months, having recently returned after 26 months overseas.

Crichton Training Will Start Your New and Bright Career

Make 1946 a Year Of Fine Progress For You and Yours

You can start a new career with the new year by training quickly for a position with a future. The year 1946 will be a critical one in the careers of most young people. Some will get established in secure positions due to proper training, while others without the needed background will struggle for poor, uncertain jobs. Specialized training will largely determine the group in which you will find yourself. Resolve now, as the new year begins, that you will be ready for a worthwhile future, and let Crichton's Business College give you the needed training for a successful future in private or government business. The field of business offers good starting salaries, social prestige, and stimulating associates. Hours of work are regular. Surroundings are pleasant and healthful, and the work is interesting. It provides an opportunity to use all your ability and previous education, while chances for advancement are unlimited. You can earn a good living while you learn the business.

A new group of students will begin training at Crichton's Business College for business careers, with the start of the midwinter term in January. Enrollments will be accepted any day for this term up to Jan. 21. The school is open throughout the year and new students are accepted each week, as Crichton's individual instruction in the major subjects allows the student to advance as fast as the assignments can be completed. These new students will prepare for positions as secretaries, stenographers, machine shorthand reporters, typists, bookkeepers, accountants, comptometer or electric bookkeeping machine operators and junior executives. They will quickly gain specific skills and knowledge which will create a permanent demand for their services in modern business, and Crichton's Free Placement Bureau will assist all graduates to obtain employment. The midwinter term provides an opportunity for those who have been postponing their plans to make a fresh start. Some have been released from military service. Others who have held wartime jobs want to get ready for peacetime careers. Some have been working in seasonal jobs. Others have been undecided, but now want to make a new start with the new year. They want to keep pace with their friends who have gone on to school. We invite you to join these ambitious young people to make 1946 the most important year of progress in your career. Crichton's Business College is fully accredited by the National Association of Accredited Commercial Schools, and is a member of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the National Council of Business Schools and the Georgia Association of Private Business Schools.

Crichton's Business College is an approved school for veteran training in business adininistration, and the veterans now in training at this school are preparing for an advantageous business career, worthy of those who have played a part in the winning of the war. Servicemen and women saw in wartime how specialized training and the most effective equipment helped our armed forces to achieve victory. The same basic factors will help you to win success and happiness in peacetime, and Crichton's stands ready to give you a position of security in the brilliant business world of tomorrow. Any veteran wishing information about government-paid education should contact the registrar, Mr. Art Gilham in the school office.

Ruben's Proves Popular Place For Fur Buyers

Fur coat—and various fur pieces—were among the popular things for the past Christmas, and will continue to be during the coming days and months of the New Year.

That's why Ruben's Fur Shop, 222 Loew's Grand building, has prepared for the desires and demands of the ladies of this city and section.

For at Ruben's the women of Atlanta can inspect a line of new and modern fur coats, guaranteed correct in workmanship and genuine colors—they can also learn just how well and nicely coats can be remodeled to the latest styles, see furs that have been renovated, reglossed to bring back their luster, and made most attractive—and can also learn of a safe and modern storage place for their furs.

Hy Ruben, son of the owner and founder of Ruben's Fur Shop, after four years in war service, is now associated with his father in his well-konwn fur business.

Young Ruben was a member of the Eighth Air Force, and for three years served Uncle Sam overseas, covering much of Europe in his service. While yet a young man, he has had considerable experience in the fur business, keeping in close touch with his father's business before entering the war service.

So, remember, ladies, if you want a pretty, new fur coat—or want your present one remodeled and brought up to date—or the fur renovated, or reglossed to restore lost luster, and in addition want full information about a safe place to store your furs—you would do well to call at Ruben's Shop, in Loew's Grand Theater building. Call him and let him give you some valuable information and help you about your furs.

NOW ON DISPLAY—Drug stores and other dispensers of soft drinks are much interested in the fine display of Weber Bobtailed soda fountain and Taylor freezer for making ice cream and frosted malted now at the W. T. Shackelford Company, 393 Peachtree street, N. E. In the picture, ready to explain the excellence of the products, is Miss Marcella Carter, secretary of the sales division.

Officials Trinity Furniture Shops Wish Happy New Year to Everyone

The officials of the Trinity Furniture Shop, Inc., 363 Boulevard, N. E., pauses long enough to not only wish their friends and patrons a happy and prosperous New Year, but to return to them their sincere appreciation for the patronage enjoyed from them during the past year.

This well-known concern was so busy during the war days in giving assistance to Uncle Sam in many ways, that it regrets it could not, at times, care for all the work its civilian patrons desired. Now the situation is different. Some of their workmen who were called into service are back, and with an old and well-trained force of artisans, the Trinity Shops is now prepared to more fully care for its patrons.

In their large plant on the Boulevard, covering many thousands of square feet, scores of high-class, master craftsmen have been busy for years on work of restoring antiques to their original color and appearance, and in rebuilding and repairing furniture of various kinds for the households of this and surrounding sections.

The Trinity Shops has been making over furniture of all kinds, as well as making to order new artistic pieces of furniture for many patrons. It was founded by Robert L. Green many years ago. He had had many years' experience in this type of work. He is still the head of the concern.

The scope of Trinity's furniture repairing embraces everything, both antique and modern, from chairs to grand pianos and radios. In rebuilding, each piece is taken apart, strengthened and reassembled with the same painstaking care used in making a new piece.

The concern does much repair work on radio cabinets.

Master craftsmen at Trinity rebuild the case, or cabinetwork of grand pianos — duplicating, with fidelity of detail, the original workmanship.

Exterminating Co. Slaying Rodents By the Hundreds

By PRESS HUDDLESTON

The dangerous flea—the abominable rat.

Both have had full swing for a long time. But their day is at hand. An untimely end awaits them.

A doubly appreciated service is being rendered throughout this city and state by the Georgia Exterminating Company, of this city, in that it is doing a big share in destroying fleas, thus eliminating typhus fever—a disease that afflicts hundreds in Atlanta and thousands in the state—and is also bringing death to many thousands of rats, the despicable, dangerous pests that do millions of dollars in damage throughout the entire country.

The Georgia Exterminating Company's method is, first to dust the ranges and runs where rats prowl with 10 per cent of DDT. This dusting is the enemy and death of fleas, for they die and fall from the rat after the rodent dies from the poison it has taken —dies before it can disappear into its place of harborage.

Thus is eliminated the danger of typhus fever from its source—the flea—and also a riddance in great numbers of the despicable rat.

The Georgia Exterminating Company is doing a fine and successful job, not only in Atlanta, where it is ridding many large feed stores and mills, warehouses, public buildings, theaters, and the like, of rats, but its experts in this work are visiting many points and cities in the state, and their kills run into the thousands of rats—and with the rodents go the fleas.

In the picture herewith is shown only a few of the rats left dead from one output of poison. The total was 112. In Marietta a few nights ago 175 dead rats were found close by the poison placed for them. The poison is not only a sure-fire death, but kills so quickly there is no escape for the rat to run back into its place of hiding, and later die there, with the obnoxious effect its death always brings.

The Georgia Exterminating Company was organized several months ago by Capt. R. L. Tindol Jr., who had been conducting a rat exterminating and pest control program for the Fourth Service Command during the war. Before entering that service he had been connected with the Georgia Health Department as public health engineer. He is thoroughly trained in the work from his long experience in the service of Uncle Sam, and has trained others connected with his company to handle this most effective poisoning. In fact, it is of such character that only experienced and trained experts can handle it with the safety it requires. It is not sold by the company, but is used only by the exterminating company in its work of killing fleas and rats.

As is generally known, typhus fever is transmitted to those who have been bitten by a flea which has been in contact with rats. There were in 1945 some 132 cases of typhus fever in Atlanta, with five deaths. In 1944 there were 53 cases, with two deaths. So, it is highly important that the flea as well as the rat be exterminated, and it is declared there is no poison so effective as that used by the Atlanta concern.

Capt. Tindol states that in order to protect pets—cats, dogs, etc.—from the poison when it is placed for rats, an especially made box is provided with a hole in it just large enough for the rat to enter, but not large enough to admit entrance of pets.

If rats are your pest, call the Georgia Exterminating Company, MA. 2616, and let it rid your place of such pests as these, along with getting you rid of the dangerous flea. No charge if your rats are not killed.

HIT DEADLINE

Capt. Ailor Home After Pacific Trek

Jack Ailor, until Thursday a captain in the United States Army and a veteran of 43 months' service in the Pacific, made it home for Christmas all right—but it was just by the skin of his teeth.

Jack Ailor

In October when he was relieved of duty on New Guinea, he thought he had plenty of time. In fact, it was not being too optimistic to hope he would be home for Thanksgiving. All he had to do was wait for a ship, and so he waited— for five weeks.

By Dec. 1 he was finally at sea, headed for home, and 18 days later he landed in San Pedro, Cal.—only to find that chances for getting home were something less than slim.

"We were held on the boat for two days," Capt. Ailor recalled, "and that's where we thought we were going to spend Christmas. But the third group called out was the one for Fort McPherson, and I caught the last train for Ft. Mac before Christmas."

The son of Alderman Roscoe Ailor and Mrs. Ailor, of 866 Boulevard, S. E., Capt. Ailor was drafted into the Army in February, 1942, and in two months was on a troop ship headed for the Pacific. Assigned to Ordnance, he landed in Melbourne, Australia, and was sent to Port Moresby, New Guinea, in September, 1942, just in time to get in on one of the biggest Japanese bombing raids.

"Our antiaircraft was pretty disheartening then," he said. "When the Jap planes would come in, we would get them in the searchlights, but they would keep on coming anyway. Our little 40-mm's that we had then couldn't reach the planes. It was not until we got the 90-mm's that we could get back at them."

Ailor was sent back to Brisbane for officers candidate school from which he was commissioned, and returned to New Guinea early in 1943.

"I've been at every base on New Guinea except Lae," he said.

A year ago, Capt. Ailor transferred to the judge advocate branch, and was trial judge advocate of the general court-martial at Base C, Hollandia. His "old boss"—Col. Harry Clarke, staff judge advocate for New Guinea headquarters — defended Yammashita in the recent trials in Manila.

Out of the Army on the basis of 93 points, Capt. Ailor plans to resume his law practice in the office of Powell-Goldstein-Frazer & Murphy.

Service Tuesday To Honor Dead Of Last War

A city-wide worship service in the form of a New Year's tribute to the men and women who gave their lives in World War II will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Druid Hills Baptist church under the sponsorship of the Atlanta Christian Council.

Speakers will be Dr. Matthew Warren, of All Saints Episcopal church, and Chaplain Ralph W. Rogers, of the Fourth Service Command.

Others participating on the program will be Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, of the Central Presbyterian church; Dr. Edward G. Mackay, of the Glenn Memorial Methodist church; Dr. David Marx, of the Temple; Dr. Harrison McMains, of the First Christian church, and Dr. J. R. Brokhoff, of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer. Haskell Boyter, minister of music at Druid Hills Baptist church, will direct the music for the program.

Gen. Edward H. Brooks and Gen. Charles B. Palmer, of the Fourth Service Command; Gen. I. Spalding, of Fort McPherson; Gov. Arnall and Mayor Hartsfield will occupy reserved seats, together with the families who have lost relatives in the war.

'Y' Expands Lodgings for Servicemen

Almost 7,000 men from the armed forces have been provided sleeping quarters at the Atlanta YMCA during December, an even larger number than in November, when 6,500 found lodging in the central building on Luckie street.

Because of the city-wide shortage of rooms, officials of the "Y" have converted every available inch of space into accommodations for sleepers by the installation of cots and other facilities in gymnasiums and other rooms.

These temporary arrangements have enabled the organization to greatly expand its regular dormitory facilities, which have long been packed to capacity.

Entertainment is also provided for the soldiers, sailors and Marines, such as regular Saturday night dances and the "Java Club" on Sunday mornings, when the service men are entertained at breakfast, followed by devotional services.

It is estimated that more than 1,000,000 service men have enjoyed the facilities of the "Y" in one form or another during the past four years.

New Year Service

"New Life in the New Year" is the subject for a church night service at 11 p. m. today at St. Mark Methodist church. Dr. Lester Rumble will be in charge.

HELLO, GOOD-BY—That could have been the greeting Friday night when Dr. Lester A. Brown (left), retiring pastor of the Edgewood Baptist church, greeted the Rev. William Courtenay Oakes, new pastor, at a dinner at the church. In the center is G. C. Cobb, chairman of the board of deacons. Dr. Brown had served as pastor of the church 14 years, while the new minister has just received his discharge as an Army chaplain.

Koreans Greet Big Three Plan With Stoning of GIs

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 29.—(Delayed)—(AP)—Koreans stoned American soldiers, fought one another in the streets and engaged in mass work stoppage Saturday in a medley of internal political dissent and angry objection to the Big Three's five-year trusteeship program for this independence-hungry country.

American military authorities, who control the southern half of Korea, clapped on an 8 p. m. curfew, but the resentment against the program announced in Moscow, plus conflict between Rightists and Leftists, made it possible that more serious trouble might develop. (There was no word from the northern half of Korea, occupied by Russian troops.)

Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, commander of American forces, told Korean newspapermen at a conference late Sunday that the Moscow program of the Russian, American and British foreign ministers called for Korean independence and did not mean immediate imposition of a trusteeship.

The general, however, had not received his copy of the Moscow communique until late in the day, and the Koreans, who bristle at the "trusteeship," already had heard something of the program and formed their own opinions.

By noon mass walkouts were in progress. Hundreds of Koreans employed by the American Military government quit work and left the government palace. Policemen left their beats and banks closed.

The plan announced by the Big Three called for eventual re-establishment of Korea as an independent nation, first by creation of a provisional government, establishment of a commission by American and Russian occupation authorities to recommend further steps to the United States, Russia and China, and the working out of a four-power trusteeship for a period "up to five years" while the country develops ability to stand on its own feet.

Snubbed, But Satisfied, Is Reaction of Chinese

CHUNGKING, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Agreements reached at the foreign ministers' conference in Moscow drew a mixed reception in the Chinese press.

The Central Daily News expressed satisfaction with the agreement on Japan because, "it follows mostly China's proposals."

The Communist New China Daily News welcomed accord on China "because the wishes of the Big Three coincide with those of the Chinese people." It expressed hope American forces would leave China as soon as the responsibility of disarming and deporting Japanese troops is discharged or the Chinese government is in a position to do the disarming without American assistance.

Hsin Ming Pao said "the improvement in Russian-American relations will help stabilize the far eastern situation and clear away any external stimulus to China's internal strife."

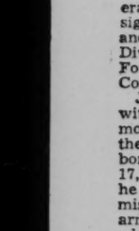
The paper added, however, that failure to invite China to the conference "shows China has lost her place as one of the Big Four."

The army medium Ho Ping Pao in similar vein declared, "The fact that problems concerning the whole world were discussed and decided by only three powers is regrettable."

The Commercial Daily News said "We feel extremely embarrassed that China, once a leading power, now becomes a country whose destiny is guided by others. However, we welcome the policy of non-interference in our internal affairs and the sincerity with which the Big Three agreed on the need for a unified, democratic China."

Col. Jones Named Service Command Security Chief

Col. Catesby C. Jones Jr., a veteran of two wars, has been assigned as director of the Security and Intelligence Division of the Fourth Service Command.



Col. C. C. Jones

Jones served with the Richmond Blues on the Mexican border in 1916-17, after which he was commissioned in the army and served with the 3rd Cavalry in France. Returning to the States, he was stationed at various posts with the 8th, 13th and 14th Cavalry Regiments, and later was assigned to the General Staff of the War Department Military Intelligence. He and his wife now make their home at Fort McPherson.

King Albert of Belgium awarded the officer the Chevalier Order of the Crown of Belgium for his service in World War I. He also wears the Legion of Merit, awarded for his work in military intelligence.

Purchasers Of Surplus To Pay on Delivery

In an effort to stem a flood of checks coming in to the Georgia state office of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's Consumer Goods Division, for the purchase of vehicles, officials of the agency are urging buyers to withhold payment until they are notified of their award of surplus vehicles.

Checks currently being received, W. H. Hicks, in charge of the Georgia state office at 294 1/2 Peachtree Street, N. E., stated, are for a sale beginning Jan. 7, to federal agencies, state and local governments, veterans certified by SWPC, and authorized dealers. All checks will be returned immediately, he said.

The correct procedure, Hicks explained, is for eligible buyers to submit their orders, after inspecting the vehicles. Purchasers are asked to express their preference of vehicles by listing them in the order of their choice. Successful purchasers will be notified of the award at the close of the sale, and will be furnished complete instructions for payment at that time.

CAUTION NEEDED

Fatalities Fewer, Says Safety Chief

Maj. C. A. Williams, director of the Department of Public Safety, reports that fatalities during the Christmas holidays show a marked decrease as compared with the previous year.

In commenting of this decrease, he is of the opinion that both pedestrians and motorists exercised an unusual amount of caution.

"Past experience indicates we can expect traffic accidents to increase in the winter months from 10 to 25 per cent over the summer months," he said.

"With the release of tire rationing, and with the average car about ten years old, January and February accidents will soar higher than ever unless motorists exercise extreme caution."

The principal causes of winter traffic accidents are slippery roads and poor visibility. Traction is reduced on icy, wet, or muddy roads and poor visibility results from longer hours of darkness, fogged windshields and rain.

In January last year 51 persons were killed in Georgia traffic accidents.

The greater number of rural accidents occurred during the hours of dusk or darkness. Reports also indicate that one out of three of the violations reported was for driving at a speed too fast for existing conditions.

Ready to Lease Floor Space at Bomber Plant

MARIETTA, Ga., Dec. 30.—Almost as a New Year gift comes the announcement that 1,000,000 square feet of floor space is immediately available for lease to private industry.

According to Joe S. Wingo, secretary of the Cobb County chamber of commerce, the space is in outside buildings of the Bell Bomber plant.

Wingo said the information was given him by Col. William M. Altenburg, plant representative of the Army.

Sizes of buildings made available by the action range from 500 to 180,000 square feet, Wingo said. No announcement has been made as to the price of the buildings.

One stipulation is made due to the fact that the Army is going to hold the local facilities on a standby basis. The stipulation is that no alterations can be made on the buildings.

With so many applications having piled up with the Chamber, it appears that Marietta will soon be getting new industries, Wingo said.

No leases have been awarded yet, according to Wingo, but Col. Altenburg is accepting applications.

Fog, Ice Force Truman's Yacht In to Anchorage

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—(AP)—Heavy fog and floating ice forced President Truman's yacht, the Williamsburg, back to an anchorage off Quantico, Va., Sunday.

The White House said the Williamsburg left Quantico about 9 a. m., after spending the night there, and proceeded about ten miles down the Potomac before turning back.

Eben Ayers, Presidential secretary, told reporters that the yacht is expected to remain at the Quantico anchorage Sunday night.

Mr. Truman, he said, watched a movie with members of his party Saturday night after conferring with Secretary of State Byrnes on results of the Moscow meeting of foreign ministers. Ayers said he did not know the title of the movie.

Later, the President worked on bills which have been passed by congress. He expects to return to Washington Wednesday.

Sodium Nitrate, Oil Sold as Surplus

Two scarce items—14 thousand gallons of linseed oil and 40 thousand pounds of sodium nitrate—will be offered for sale to the general public as surplus property beginning Jan. 10, according to H. E. Everett, manager of the Atlanta agency, Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

E. W. Welch, salesman of the Surplus Property Division, 699 Ponce de Leon avenue, will have charge of the sale.

The property is located at the United States Naval Ordnance plant, Macon.
